Truck Firms Lift Lockout, Teamsters Await B.C. Order

House Backs Work Motion

By DON COLLINS and IAN STREET

The question of what happens next—a return to work in the trucking industry, a head-on collision between government and labor, or even a provincial election—hangs over B.C. in the wake of a historic 4½-hour debate in the Legislature Wednesday.

Premier Bennett has made it clear he is willing to stand or fall on the results government action might bring.

His pronouncement was made before the B.C. Legislature passed a resolution designed to end a strike-lockout that began only last Friday in the trucking and warehouse industry.

No Word on Order

The necessary back-to-work order would have to be drawn up by cabinet, but Bennett wasn't prepared to say outside the House when such a move would be made.

Just the same, one side in the dispute—the Automotive Transport Labor Relations Association—was ready to move immediately.

Said Carl Anshelm, ATLRA director: "We will comply with the wishes of the Legislature—I am now sending a telegram to the teamsters ending the lockout."

The union, however, wasn't ready to say what way it would move.

Senator Ed Lawson, Canadian director of the teamsters, said that no decision would be made by the union on whether or not to obey a government order until the union is served with such an order.

Even then, the union's West Coast officers would have to study the order closely.

SMALL SIGN-BEARER joined unidentified teamsters demonstrating outside Legislature Wednesday just before debate began on back-to-work resolution. Fraser Leversedge, 3, of 4035 Magdalen, Saanich, was passing by with his mother when teamster put sign in his hand.—(Ellis Shipman)

U.S. 'Will Give In' To N-Blackmail

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI) — Gen. Curtis Lemay predicted Tuesday that within 18 months the United States would be forced to give in to a Soviet ultimatum to "capitulate or else."

The retired air force chief of staff, who was George Wallace's vice-presidential running mate in 1968, said he anticipated that Russia would serve ultimatums, including "complete withdrawal of American forces in Vietnam," and that President Nixon would have no choice but to surrender or succumb to the demands.

Asked to define what he meant by "or else," he replied, "nuclear weapons." He said "Russia is spending money on what is today the finest strategic weapons system in the world."

OTTAWA (UPI) — Members of a Commonwealth committee set up last month to look into British arms sales to South Africa will be expected to determine if a meeting of the committee is "still worthwhile," it was disclosed here Wednesday.

Commonwealth Secretary-General Arnold Smith and Canadian External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp agreed here Wednesday to go ahead with efforts to convene the meeting of the committee.

A Canadian spokesman said after the one-hour closed meeting that Smith would be getting in touch with the other members of the committee to see if they agreed with Canada that a meeting was "still worthwhile."

For Oceans

The eight-nation committee was established by the recent Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in Singapore to examine British claims that arms sales to South Africa were necessary for the security of the South Atlantic and Indian oceans.

However, the British government announced Monday it would sell Wasp military helicopters to the apartheid South African government without waiting for the committee's findings and without further Commonwealth consultations.

Still Useful

After the announcement, the Nigerian government announced it was quitting the committee and India was reported considering a similar move. The other members of the committee are Australia, Britain, Canada, Jamaica, Kenya and Malaysia.

The spokesman said Wednesday Sharp and Smith

Debate Spirited

The resolution passed by a 37-13 vote about 6:35 p.m. after the House sat through the dinner hour with only a break of a few minutes.

The outcome was a foregone conclusion because of the heavy government representation, but the matter wasn't settled without spirited debate on the type of vital question that had never been before the B.C. Legislature before.

It was the first time the government had sought to work through the Legislature to impose compulsory measures of the controversial Mediation Act (Bill 33). The act came into being early in 1968 and has been bitterly opposed by labor.

The debate found the government's Social Credit members arguing for the need to protect the public interest and

Little Boy Kidnapped By German Leftists

BONN (AP) — A band of leftist terrorists has kidnapped a seven-year-old boy and is holding him hostage for the release of leftist West German lawyer Horst Mahler, a Munich lawyer disclosed Wednesday.

The kidnapers are also demanding a ransom of 200,000 marks ($54,000) from the West German republic for the release of the boy, the lawyer said.

The boy, Michael Luhmer from the village of Niederbachem, near Bonn, has been missing since Monday.

Mahler is being held in West Berlin on suspicion of aiding the escape last May of Andreas Bader, 27, who had been serving a three-year term for arson at a Frankfurt department store.

The Munich lawyer, Rolf Bossi, said his office received a call Wednesday demanding the ransom money.

Year's Bus Loss Hits $775,000

B.C. Hydro buses in Greater Victoria operated at a loss of $775,000 in the fiscal year 1969-70, it was learned Wednesday in the Legislature.

In answers to written questions, Premier Bennett disclosed that total loss for the Hydro urban transit system that year was $4.7 million, of which Hydro paid $2.7 million, the other $2 million being paid by the provincial government.

The $775,000 represented 17 per cent of the total loss, with the other 83 per cent being incurred by the Greater Vancouver transit system.

But revenue covered a smaller portion of expenses in Victoria than in Vancouver. In Victoria, the revenue was 68 per cent of the expenses, while in Vancouver it covered 78 per cent of the costs.

Total operating expenses in Victoria for 1969-70 were $2.5 million while revenue was $1.7 million. Similar figures for Vancouver were: revenue, $13.5 million; expenses, $17.4 million.

Last week the provincial government made an offer to the Vancouver and Victoria regions to join in managing the transit system, provided

Allowance May Hinge On Number of Children

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister John Munro said Wednesday he thinks his department's white paper proposal to change the family allowance system will have to be altered to take a family's number of children into account as well as its income.

But in general terms, he said, he still considers the cutoff point of $10,000 income, beyond which the social security white paper proposes that family allowances not be paid, is reasonable.

"We are trying to come up with some type of tapering formula that would eliminate the situation of a family with one child and $9,800 income receiving some benefits, and a family with 10 children and $10,100 income receiving none," he said in an interview.

"The only thing I can tell you is that we will have to bring in some formula. I think, that is, based on the number of children."

Bonds Just Too Good

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

In an immediate sequel to the Bank of Canada's cut-the-rate policy, the government of Canada announced closure on its current issue of Canada savings bonds as from March 5.

Normally the CSB issues run until late August or early September when they are withdrawn to make way for the following year's issue introduced in November.

They have not hitherto been withdrawn as early as this.

The reason for withdrawal is that, compared with other call money investments, they are paying far too high a rate of return to the holder.

Issued for a period of 11 years, the 1970-71 savings bonds have an average yield of 7½ per cent, and if they are held to maturing allowing the interest to accumulate each $100 invested will become $227.50 by 1981.

This year they pay 6½ per cent; for the next three years they pay 7½ per cent, and for the last seven years they pay 8 per cent.

Because the yield of 7½ per cent is at least one point higher than is available on any other Canadian government bond, the CSB during the past two months have become highly popular with investors.

Sales have skyrocketed after a slow start last November, and it has been suspected for some time that the government would have to stop sales in them if it was really determined to fight a battle against high money costs.

the economy, and the NDP fighting bitterly against what it said would mark the end of collective bargaining in the province.

The Liberals, with the exception of one member, voted with the government.

Barrie Clark, North Vancouver-Seymour, broke ranks and voted with the NDP against the resolution.

Bitter feelings were displayed more than once during the debate and spilled out into the corridors during the brief adjournment.

Visibly upset, Robert Strachan, NDP Cowichan-Malahat and former party leader, shouted his displeasure for anyone to hear. He said the government's move to end the dispute was one more step to "destroying democracy."

Angered still more by government members who taunted him in the hallway, he at one point suggested that Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell "knock your head against the wall and knock some sense into it."

Support Pledged

He said the government was against the working people to such an extent that its actions would fan the fires of revolution.

The confrontation with labor would come if Lawson and his Teamsters decide to disobey any order they receive. The B.C. Federation of Labor has promised full support in such an event.

In another part of Victoria during the afternoon, the Vancouver Island Building Trades Council pledged the same support.

Once council spokesman said: "I hope Lawson decides to take a stand against any government order."

The Legislature resolution passed says in part: "... in order to protect the public interest and welfare the work stoppage resulting from the dispute between certain employers in the transportation industry and the General Truck Drivers and Helpers Union, Local 31 shall immediately cease, and that the normal operations of those employers shall be resumed forthwith."

View the Whole

Speaking on the issue in the House, Bennett said the motion was one of the most important and far-reaching ever put before the Legislature, and said the trucking industry was vital to the provincial economy.

"I believe in fair treatment for all and special treatment for none," he said. "We must not favor any part but view the whole."

He said he had won seven elections with ever-increasing majorities on this principle, then indicated what could happen if the Teamsters don't comply with the legislation.

"If they don't do this — if they cause chaos in this province, then we'll call a general election on this issue."

Full Picture

He said he did not agree that what was "good for General Bullmoose" was good for the nation, or what is good for MacMillan Bloedel is good for the province.

"I don't agree that what's good for Senator Lawson is necessarily good for the people. But in total, they make the full picture of the economy of this province."

The NDP had argued throughout that the government was inventing a crisis that didn't exist to push the resolution through for political purposes and that the working man should not be deprived of his lone economic weapon.

The government had its own ideas about what it seemed to consider ulterior motives on the part of the NDP and this may have been best expressed by the premier when he shouted across the floor during a heated exchange.

'Dirty Thirties'

"The NDP doesn't want jobs," he declared. "It wants unemployment. They want to bring back the dirty thirties."

He was questioned by reporters outside the House and said no special cabinet meeting had been planned to approve the order that would, under terms of the Mediation Act, demand the truckers return to the job within 24 hours.

Asked if it would be dealt with Friday morning at the next regular cabinet meeting, he said he could give no indication of what action would be taken.

Bennett described Lawson as a personal friend whom he holds in high esteem and added: "I know that in his heart, when the Legislature has made its decision, he will observe the law."

Friendship

Lawson, whose union was praised in the House by Peterson for its responsible reputation in B.C., also referred to Bennett's friendship during an interview.

"I think the premier misunderstood our (teamsters') sense of responsibility as a sign of weakness. I think he is taking political advantage of a personal friendship," Lawson said.

During debate the NDP had accused the government of acting on conjecture and not fact, to which Lawson added in the interview:

"I've never seen a debate proceed on such misinformation. All they had to do was make a single phone call to get the right information."

Pickets Outside

As the debate raged on, 60 Teamsters from Vancouver and Victoria paraded in a cold rain outside the buildings with placards charging the government with interference in the system of collective bargaining.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett walked with them for a minute or so.

Lawson made another point in a later interview. He said that in view of what had happened the union would have to take a fresh look at its policy of non-political alignment.

Speaking on his motion before the House, Peterson said the trucking industry was the lifeblood of the provincial economy and played an important role where the export market was concerned.

'Responsible'

He said the serious effects of the strike-lockout were already being felt — "even in these few days."

Peterson said he personally regretted the need to press for such government action, but he was sure the good of the people and the economy should come first.

"It has been my experience over the years that the particular union involved has been a responsible union under responsible leadership," he said. It had also, according to Peterson, provided needed leadership on occasion for the rest of the B.C. labor movement. (It is outside the official house of labor.)

He referred to the fact that the "struck goods clause" is the only point of difference. The union wants the right not to have to handle goods brought from behind a picket line by non-union personnel.

By afternoon, Lawson said 44 companies — some of them

ATLRA members — had signed new contracts containing the clause and that there was no major threat to the public.

Other Means

Peterson said there would be sufficient time for the parties to settle their differences by some other means — before having to move the matter before the Mediation Commission.

He said there would be room for the sides to go before an independent party or parties of their own choosing.

Barrett, who spoke for 35 minutes, said the government was ignorant of the facts and that the motion named only the one local that took strike action and not the two locked out.

"The attorney-general (Peterson is also attorney-general) has bungled this thing right from the beginning."

Challenge

Referring to Peterson's offer to let the sides meet with a third-party, or parties, Barrett said:

"I challenge the attorney-general to state why not one of these options was offered to the disputants last Friday?" (That was the day the dispute began and when Peterson served notice of motion.)

"Why wasn't your department put to work over the weekend to test the various options?" Barrett asked.

He said the parties might have been on the road to settlement if Peterson hadn't interfered. He also charged that the move was politically inspired and was meant to divide society.

Shotgun

Barrett said Peterson's action threatened an end to collective bargaining.

It was, in effect, "a shotgun held to the head of the disputants," he said.

Alan Williams (L-West Vancouver-Howe Sound) failed in an attempt to push through an amendment that would have put the dispute before someone with special knowledge of the industry and problems at hand.

The mediation commission came under attack repeatedly as having never experienced success and as being a barricade in the way of better labor relations.

Union Unhappy

Unlike unions within the federation of labor, the Teamsters went before the commission once. The union was so unhappy with the results that Lawson said he wouldn't appear before the same commissioners again.

When David Broussan, (L-North Vancouver-Capilano) suggested that the commission had "doublecrossed" the teamsters, Herb Capozzi, S.C.-Vancouver-Centre, demanded that he withdraw the remark.

Broussan did so. Liberal leader Pat McGreer condemned the government for creating a bad labor-management situation in the province, but said his party was supporting the motion with "profound regrets."

All Bases

As members took turns attacking and defending the government's action, they touched on all imaginable bases. They even included mention of Hitler, Jack London, Abe Lincoln, horses and the use of a black snakeskin whip.

Peterson, who wound up the debate, said the NDP appeared to believe that public interest shouldn't come first.

"I don't share that viewpoint and I don't think the people of B.C. share that viewpoint," he said.

U.S. Officials Deny Laos Raid Bogged

WASHINGTON (AP) — defense Secretary Melvin Laird and a top general denied Wednesday that the South Vietnamese drive against Communist command supply routes in Laos has bogged down.

"The operation is going according to plan," Laird said.

Lt. Gen. John W. Vogt of the United States Air Force, who is director of the joint military staff, said reports that the drive is bogged down are far from the truth.

Saying such reports are "usually attributable to a junior officer in the field," the general added somewhat testily.

"There seems to be an impatience on the part of a great many people to have an operation achieve total success in two weeks. Nobody in his fondest dreams ever hoped we would achieve all the objectives in the first two weeks."

Vogt said the "decision to pause at this particular point was made because of a desire to assess the enemy actions at this time, observe where he did intend to attack."

Laird and Vogt appeared at a news conference obviously designed to counter rising concern in Congress and elsewhere that the U.S.-supported South Vietnamese campaign against the Ho Chi Minh Trail is running aground and possibly is in danger of failure.

Somewhat dramatically, Pentagon officials unveiled for reporters a section of what they said was the North Vietnamese motor fuel pipeline reported severed by South Vietnamese forces. They said this seriously impaired North Vietnamese ability to use trucks to carry war equipment and supplies down the trails to their troops in South Vietnam and Cambodia.

Laird and Vogt claimed major objectives already have been achieved, including the tearing up of sections of the pipeline, cutting of the main north-south Route 92 and the disruption of Route 914, another road described as important.

Base Battles Tougher

SAIGON (AP) — Sharp fighting was reported Wednesday at two South Vietnamese bases inside Laos, where the United States command claimed air strikes have knocked holes in the Ho Chi Minh Trail supply line.

Field reports said six more U.S. helicopters were shot down or damaged Tuesday and Wednesday in the fighting around the bases. Officers in the field told correspondents that the two bases had come under heavy rocket and mortar fire. Ground fighting was reported around the bases, but no details were immediately available.

Britain Would Tighten Immigration Controls

LONDON (CP) — Legislation clamping tighter controls on immigration into Britain was published Wednesday by the Conservative government.

Home Secretary Reginald Maudling told the Commons as he moved second reading that the bill is aimed at halting "further large-scale immigration."

It imposes police checks on new immigrants—with a few exceptions—and some saw it as favoring white against non-white immigrants whose growing number in Britain is attacked by persons such as maverick Tory MP Enoch Powell.

Powell was silent Wednesday but criticism of the bill on racial grounds came immediately from two organizations concerned about the welfare of the colored population.

"Racially discriminatory," said a spokesman for the Joint Council on Race Relations.

Mark Bonham-Carter, chairman of the community relations commission, said he told Maudling it will have an adverse effect on community and race relations. It would "acutely increase the insecurity which colored people living here already feel."

On television, an interviewer suggested to Maudling that the measure is "a camouflaged color bar."

"There's no color bar," the minister replied. However, it does give the edge to some white prospective immigrants in one respect. Persons from Commonwealth countries who can prove their parents or grandparents were born here are given the right of abode—called "patriality"—free of all immigration restrictions.

Obviously this favors predominantly white countries such as Canada. For immigrants without this qualification, entry provisions remain about the same.

Arab Rebels Agree to Merge 11 Groups

From AP
In an effort to save the Palestinian Arab guerrilla movement from collapse, guerrilla leader Yasser Arafat and Brig. Abdelrazzak Yahya, commander of the Palestine Liberation Army, have agreed to merge the 11 main guerrilla groups. Meeting during the weekend in Damascus, Syria, with the central committee of the guerrilla movement, the two chiefs also agreed to curb leftist guerrilla groups urging the overthrow of Jordan's King Hussein. Informants said the two reached agreement to try to avert an open rebellion against the guerrillas by the 7,000-man Palestine Liberation Army stationed in Syria.

PLA officers have been concerned over the inability of the guerrillas to challenge the growing momentum for a peaceful settlement between the Arab states and Israel, the sources said. The officers were reported to have authorized Yahya to make public demands for drastic reforms in the resistance movement. It marked the first challenge to Arafat's leadership since he became top man in the guerrilla movement.

Dead Slow But Moving

THE GENEVA DISARMAMENT conference convening on Tuesday for a new session heard a call from the president of the United States for an immediate international agreement prohibiting development, production and stockpiling of biological weapons. To help achieve this aim, President Nixon's message said, the United States was ready to commit itself to full negotiations on a similar ban on chemical weapons. It sounds like the beginning of another wearying round of talks almost without progress. But little by little, progress in arms limitation, if not disarmament, is achieved.

The Conference of the (UN) Committee on Disarmament at Geneva has been trying to produce an agreement to ban the use of both biological and chemical weapons. The Soviet Union has proposed to ban both types at once. But the American and British position is that separate, step-by-step agreements would bring quicker actual results. The problems of fully acceptable definition of chemical weapons, as compared with biological weapons, lends weight to this argument against a draft package treaty.

On the other hand, President Nixon may have given an indication that the United States is willing to give "chemical weapons" a wider interpretation than it has heretofore. He said in his message that prohibition of chemical weapons is more complex than that of biological weapons because chemical means of warfare already have been deployed by armed forces, and biological weapons have not. This could be taken to mean only that poisonous gas has been used in the past. Or it could mean that the U.S. administration is prepared to debate whether tear gas is a chemical weapon when used to flush out enemies from strongholds and expose them to bombing, or herbicides when used to destroy cover or kill crops in enemy territory, or napalm or smoke or flame.

Either way, the prospect is that the differences in positions at Geneva will be overcome at the pace of a glacier. But it is heartening to be reminded that in nine years of similar slow deliberation and negotiation, the conference has in fact produced the nuclear test-ban treaty, the Antarctic treaty, the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, the United States-Soviet Union hot-line agreement, a Latin American non-nuclear zone accord and a treaty banning the use of the seabed for nuclear weapons. Word by word, comma by comma, it reaches toward some real measure of disarmament.

Open-Pit Mining Beauty

THE PRESIDENT of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy is reported to have told an institute symposium in Ottawa that open-pit mines in British Columbia are "a beautiful sight." Mr. H. M. Wright expanded on this rather startling statement by saying pit-mining offered relief to the constant green of the landscape.

Surprisingly, there has been little reaction despite the prominence his words were given in published reports. Perhaps shock effects have not worn off, or there is a feeling Mr. Wright was making jokes and can't be taken seriously.

But there is food for thought under what might appear to be frivolous frosting of his speech.

He was not referring to the wastelands of Kentucky and Virginia where much publicity has been given to miles of abandoned countryside scarred to the bone by strip-mining operations — landscape that will never flesh out to its natural state.

Mr. Wright was talking about this province and probably was looking specifically at such areas as the Crow's Nest where there is a slight break in the Rocky Mountains barrier between Alberta and British Columbia.

The gigantic operations of Kaiser Coal Co. Ltd. there, on which construction of the Roberts Bank superport is based, are bringing tremendous investment to British Columbia and a fair amount of employment. Whether the people of the province will benefit to any great degree is a subject that can be argued far into the night. And so is the question of the visual effects of the operation.

Mr. Wright says mining of this kind exposes interesting rock formations to view, forming a potential tourist attraction.

This could be so at the Crow's Nest which has nothing more than time-weathered rocks in inaccessible miles of mountains. The area is a wasteland as far as forestry and farming are concerned. It has little to offer in the way of development other than its mineral resources.

It could be argued that its value is in its unspoiled natural state. But despite the strong points preservationists might make, emotions have a tendency to run to extremes, and whether there will be noticeable desecration in the Kaiser operation is questionable.

Mining operators are required by provincial statute to file plans of reclamation and post performance bonds in all of their developments. In the Kaiser case one of a multitude of mountains will disappear and the overburden spread to a horizontal plane unique to the area.

The work will be watched warily, and so should the possible erosion of the newly-exposed rock which could pollute waterways with the washing out of its salts.

proaches some other country for its deportment. And yet Britain, where such behavior has become unthinkable, lives with its domestic tragedy and disgrace and somehow weathers it all without extravagant dismay.

It is deplorable, of course, but it is also a very special case. And the government's effort is seen as a wholly unselfish attempt to keep the peace and anyway the case is hopeless.

The present troubles began nearly three years ago. At their heart was the genuine protest of the Catholic minority and they had then the overwhelming sympathy of the British people. Their grievances had been endured a long time.

The best jobs, the best houses, were reserved for the Protestant majority. The constituencies that returned MPs to Westminster were gerrymandered to the electoral disadvantage of Catholics. In local elections the idea of one man one vote was not accepted. Property qualifications gave the Protestants control in Catholic areas. The Catholic minority, one-third of the whole, were grossly under-represented in politics, the judiciary, business and the police.

There began a civil rights movement which was intellectually respectable and marvellously non-partisan. At first it had considerable success. Most of the above grievances have either been righted or are now in process of being righted. And the Royal Ulster Constabulary, regarded with reason as the arm of the Protestant majority, has been disarmed and disciplined. Yet the situation has grown worse. Civil rights were not the fundamental issue.

This is not the place to rehearse the history of Ireland — although this is what this crisis is about. The Ulster situation is not the result of some passing act of administrative stupidity or even of neo-colonialism. Its origins are some 600 years old and all the more real and immediate for that.

The six Irish counties that make up Northern Ireland and are a part of the ancient province of Ulster, were always the most important part of Ireland and, for the English, the most troublesome.

To cure this ill, under King James I the English began a policy of "plantation." Under this, Scots and English working men, most of them Presbyterians, were settled on the confiscated lands of the great Irish Earls of Tyrone and Tyrconnell. The native Irish were dispossessed and have, more or less, stayed that way. The new population had a vested interest in survival.

They heroically defended themselves at the end of the 17th century against an attempt at a Catholic restoration under the ineffectual James II. They defended the city of Londonderry and in 1690 they beat the Catholics at the Battle of the Boyne under the new Dutch King of England, William III. The

Back Stabbing

AFTER Labor Minister Leslie Peterson served notice last Friday that the government must be prepared to end quickly the strike and lockout in the trucking industry, using its legislative powers, Senator Ed Lawson, leader of the teamsters, stated that the proposed government action is "the worst stab in the back ever perpetrated against a trade union."

On the one hand the minister, as elected by the people, tries to do his job for the interest of the people of this province. On the other hand the senator, who should know better, doublecrossed the majority of his people, the community, which at one time elected him, and stabs them in the back in the most fiendish way.

What does he expect from the people of this province when he continues to foster the inflationary spiral higher and higher and for no good reason. The teamsters are well off, in comparison to many others.

No Strikes

It is to be hoped that the initiative and enterprise of the employees of the Vancouver Island Coach Lines will be rewarded by many years of successful operation. Their action in taking over a nearly bankrupt and failing utility is something that calls for all the support the public can give. This kind of ownership by the public is far superior to public ownership as it is generally understood.

One can hardly fail to remark, however, that wages and working hours may become somewhat flexible and that no lack of service due to strikes is to be expected.

Peace Symbol

Regarding the origin of the peace symbol in the circle: once and for all, let's end all this nonsense about "witches' feet" and "broken crosses." A full explanation appeared in Time magazine, November 2, 1970, the substance of which is as follows:

Contrary to the smear put out by the John Birch Society to the effect that the CND symbol is an ancient anti-Christian sign, the symbol was designed in the late 1950s for the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament (CND). It was adopted by this British organization for the first bomb-bomb Aldermaston march in 1958.

The lines inside the circle stand for "nuclear disarmament."

French Fact

Did it ever occur to those who watched Premier Robert Bourassa being interviewed on CBC Television "Encounter" on February 18 that perhaps English-speaking Canadians should review their thinking about the "French Fact"?

Currently there is a wave of indignation about the United States' domination of Canadian industry; at the same time, there are those who deplore the "French Fact." Surely, if Canada is to survive as a nation, this "fact" is our strongest suit. In their striving for cultural survival, the Quebecois have no intention of being assimilated by ourselves, let alone by the Americans.

We should be prepared to make any reasonable compromise with our French-Canadian countrymen if we wish to remain Canadian.

Harmonizing on the Pollution Bandwagon of both pollution and ecology — a real great double play in today's ad world.

By FRANK LOWE

This company is so worried about tearing up the Arctic tundra it refuses to work up there in the summer when that tender tundra is all open and exposed.

Instead it works up there only in the winter—which is about 10 months of the year, but I really was mean to mention that—when the tundra is covered with snow and frozen solid.

Again, this ad forces me to turn off the TV set. Because the ad goes on to say that while working in the winter makes it harder on the men, it is this company's contribution to preserving our environment.

I mean, isn't that downright heart-rending, visualizing all those men up there in the fierce Arctic, braving the elements in their heated bulldozers and sleeping in winterized homes? With nothing to keep them warm but their growing bank balances in the south?

Then, of course, there is this problem of sewage. While any company is willing to admit that something or somebody is fouling up our lakes and rivers, they all say piously, "Don't look at me."

According to ads I am now exposed to, every chemical company, every pulp mill, every factory bordering a bit of water, has been aware of this pollution problem for years now. And yes, they have been doing something about it.

This, of course, delights me—but do they have to show me pictures of their new sewage disposal methods while I am sitting around waiting for dinner?

I feel surest of all, though, for the politicians. Poor souls, here they have been working to wipe out pollution of all kinds for years. And we, in the media, have never mentioned this.

All we talk about today is how bad pollution is. Why, they ask, can't we talk about how bad pollution would really be today if they hadn't been working so hard on the problem—unsung and unnoticed—for all those years?

A message such as that, delivered with a straight face, gets to me every time. I generally break up right in my living room, a whooping and a choking with pure enthusiasm.

The only thing is that when my wife comes across me while I am having one of those spasms she says, "Oh dear, the pollution must be getting to you."

But surely she couldn't be right, could she, when everybody else says this isn't so?

Belgian Premier Is Performing Miracle

By DON COOK, from Brussels

Sometimes a nation's most emotional and momentous political issues are ultimately solved in an anti-climatic way when nobody seems to be paying much attention—and so it has been with the Belgian language problem.

Suddenly this long, bitter communal feud between Belgium's French-speaking Walloon population and the Flemish-speaking Flemings, which has kept the country on the brink of chaos for nearly a quarter of a century, is on its way to being resolved.

Most of the credit goes to the patience, perseverance and cautious political skill of the country's premier since June, 1965, Gaston Eyskens. He is bringing off a miracle which thinking Belgians have longed for but didn't believe was possible. Now that the miracle has begun to unfold the politicians and commentators are like men walking on eggs hoping that nothing will break.

The miracle began just before parliament went into recess for Christmas.

While Everybody was out shopping and thinking of the joyous season of goodwill toward men, Eyskens' government almost surreptitiously squeezed the first piece of constitutional reform legislation through the chamber of representatives by the required three-quarters majority with exactly two votes to spare.

It was a bill which would limit French-speaking Brussels, surrounded by Flemish-speaking hinterland, to 19 downtown boroughs or districts.

It was a victory for the Flemings and a defeat for the Walloons who wanted to include at least another six suburban townships in Greater Brussels as well.

But once this key vote was

taken on an issue, which has been fiercely debated and fought over for more than a decade, reform was finally under way.

Nearly 18 months ago, Eyskens' government produced its constitutional reform plans to solve the language problem by dividing Belgium into three parts — Walloon, Flemish and Brussels — under one national government and legislature but with all kinds of built-in communal safeguards and strong semi-autonomous communal "home rule."

Until just before Christmas, however, everything has foundered on the issue of how big Greater Brussels was going to be.

The Walloons, who are now in the minority in Belgium, fought with the desperation of a minority against what they called the "Flemish Noose" around Brussels.

And the Flemings were just as aroused to halt the spread of French culture and language outwards from Brussels into sacred Flemish territory.

In this situation the country had staggered from one outbreak of trouble to the next during 1969 and 1970, with everybody predicting that it would only be a matter of time after the municipal elections of October 1970, before the Eyskens government would fall and a total political breakdown, if not civil war, would ensue.

It was a defeat for the Belgian Liberal Party in the October municipal elections which, to the total surprise of everybody, produced the narrow victory for Eyskens in the chamber of representatives just before Christmas and got the reform process going at last.

The Liberals, with 23 parliamentary seats, had been holding out against Eyskens' plan hoping to pick up electoral strength along the way.

But in October they lost ground to new extremist political groups in both Flemish and Walloon territory — and after that they suddenly decided that they could not face a national election without the danger of being wiped out.

They decided to give their votes to Eyskens' and keep the present coalition going.

So it was that the Christmas eve miracle began and has kept going step-by-step as each part of the constitutional reform package has been brought forward.

Eyskens, as a sample of political skill, immediately came forward with a measure to assuage the wounded feelings of the Walloons when the "collar around Brussels" was voted into place.

He brought in a bill to eliminate school language inspectors within Brussels, thus leaving it up to parents to decide without interference from inspectors whether their children are to go to French-speaking or Flemish-speaking schools.

At present, a school language inspector has the right to knock on the door of a child's home, determine which language is spoken in the home, and pack the child off to school accordingly.

This has led to some pretty emotional scenes — not only for Belgian families but for startled foreign families as well, who have been forced by language inspectors in Flemish districts suddenly to transfer their children to a Flemish school because French is not spoken in the home.

But with the size of Brussels and the elimination of language inspectors decided, the reform measures from here on ought to be down-hill progress.

In the end, Belgium will have a national cabinet which by law will be composed of half Walloon and half Flemish ministers plus a prime minister who can be either. The legislature will then be split into Walloon and Flemish parliamentary technical veto over the other. The reform will provide that a piece of legislation can be defeated by a three-quarters negative vote of one of the linguistic groups.

Meanwhile, each group will have complete parliamentary control over any legislation affecting its own community.

Cultural and economic councils will be established for Walloon and Flemish country, and each will be empowered to make independent cultural agreements and contracts with other countries (as Quebec does in Canada).

Within these outlines, much is left to be worked out in practice. But the hope in Belgium now is that with the basic issues resolved the heat will go out of the situation and the feuding will give way to live-and-let-live accommodation.

Campus Crusade Against Pollution

Nader Widens Base

By RUDY ABRAMSON, from Washington

Consumer activist Ralph Nader, picking up where last year's Earth Day demonstrators left off, is trying to prod students into bankrolling professionally staffed anti-pollution groups.

It is the second phase of an expanded campus crusade to arouse "student power" in the battle against pollution.

Already rolling is a scheme to establish local public interest groups with funds deducted from student tuition payments.

The latter plan has been approved on 15 campuses in Oregon. Last month 22,000 students at the University of Minnesota followed suit by agreeing to have $1 per term enthusiasm generated by Earth Day last year, has formed what he calls the Earth Action Group. It plans a week of intensive fund raising April 19-25.

Organizers are urging both high school and college students in several key states to earn or borrow $10 that week to help start local Earth Action Groups of 10 to 15 lawyers, engineers, and ecologists.

"Earth Day 1970 was an important event," Nader said. "It played a key role in raising the level of environmental consciousness. In 1971, however, it is necessary to switch the focus from educational activities to action strategies calculated to effect change."

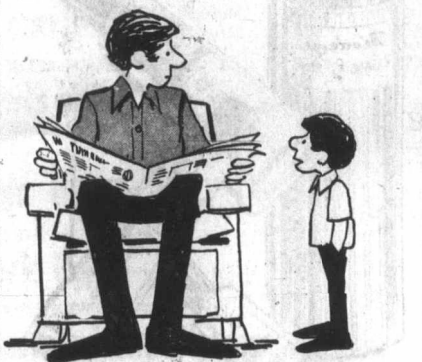

"The large corporations have embarked on an advertising campaign to desensitize public concern over these crucial problems confronting the people.

"Corporate advertisements carry the message that the public need not be concerned about the environment, that oil refineries are good for ducks, that timber cutting preserves forests, and that gasoline can keep the air clean."

"The time has come to blow the whistle on those who would lay waste the Earth. Full-time public interest advocates must be set to work in every state to reveal the sources of pollution and use every legal means to halt it."

Local Earth Action organizations would concern themselves exclusively with environmental issues. Nader himself is heading the Washington-based group that plans fund-raising strategy and develops campaign tactics.

Citizens for Law and Order Keep 'Box Score'

Lenient Judges Watched

By PHILIP HAGER, from Oakland, Calif.

A group of residents in this area have organized to keep watch on judges it considers "unduly lenient" with criminals. The organization, called Citizens for Law and Order, is apparently one of the first of its kind in America. Started only seven months ago by four local businessmen, it now includes 236 dues-paying members.

Its members keep a detailed "box score" on criminal dispositions, monitor court proceedings in selected cases and publish a widely distributed newsletter often critical of individual jurists. The organization plans to use its tabulations at election time against judges it feels are permissive or, if necessary, institute recall proceedings.

But as it has grown, so has concern with the question of where healthy public scrutiny of the courts leaves off and where intimidation begins.

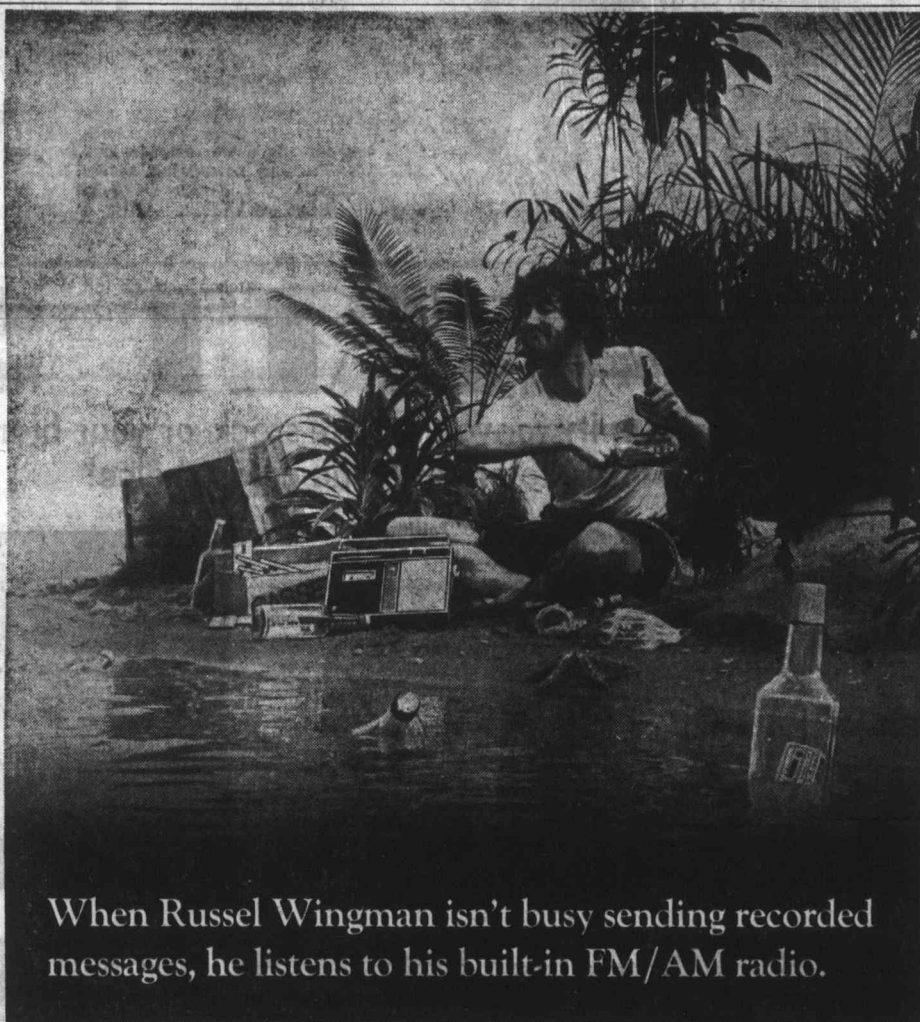

"We're not intimidating any judges," says Earl W. Hunting, 59, a life insurance company executive who is president and one of the founders of the group. "We don't comment until after a particular case is over and when we do, as any citizen, we have a perfect right to express our opinion."

Hunting believes the organization already is beginning to show results. "The judges are sitting up and taking notice. They're getting so they recognize us in court. I think we have had a salutary effect."

A trial lawyer, who asked to remain anonymous, agrees. "There's no question CLO has affected some of the judges," he says. "They're human, too, and concerned about their jobs. Some — not all, but some — are running scared."

Judicial conduct is but one of several interests of CLO. Other "task forces," as they are called, have been established by the group to combat what it feels is slanted news coverage of crime; to support legislation such as wiretapping and preventive detention it believes beneficial to law enforcement; to audit certain classes and monitor administrative actions affecting discipline in educational institutions; to assist and support law-enforcement agencies and to monitor organizations and elected officials it sees as opposed to law and order.

they also accept part of the losses incurred.

The provincial plan would involve the B.C. government continuing to provide a $2 million subsidy, Hydro providing an amount each year equal to its subsidy in 1970-71 (estimated to be about $4.4 million), and the province and the regions sharing equally any further deficit.

When the plan was announced, mayors of Greater Victoria municipalities said they were not prepared to take on such a proposal without far more information on expected deficits being given.

It was also disclosed in the Legislature Wednesday that total revenue for the two systems for the first nine months of the 1970-71 fiscal year was $12.9 million and total expenditures were $16.0 million.

Hydro chairman Gordon Strum has predicted the deficit from the transit system will be about $4.4 million for 1970-71.

In 1969-70 a total of 78.7 million passengers were carried on the transit system in both cities. In the first nine months of 1970-71, 55.7 million passengers had ridden the buses.

However, the total number of passengers for the 1970-71 fiscal year is expected to decrease because of the 33-day bus strike which began Jan. 4.

Total expenses for 1969-70 were $20 million while revenues totalled $15.3 million. Capital expenditures for the transit system amounted to $1.2 million.

Revenue for the first nine months of 1970-71 was $13.0 million, and capital expenditures were $206,000.

Carnival Hard On Brazilians

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — Carnival began to take its toll of Brazilians Tuesday with more than 150 deaths estimated through the country. In the state of Sao Paulo, police reported 85 persons killed, 35 in traffic accidents. Carnival began Saturday and ends Wednesday. The toll of injured, Rio military police said, was in the thousands.

committee meeting would be held.

He said Sharp also informed Smith of the Canadian government's position that Canada continues to oppose the arms sales but thinks it is "still useful" to have the committee study the long-term security of the South Atlantic and Indian oceans.

The spokesman said Sharp stressed that Canada did not "regard the issue as finished" following the British and Nigerian moves this week. He added there was no mention of replacing Nigeria on the committee.

Major Crisis

Smith, a Canadian, was credited with pushing through the creation of the committee at the Singapore conference — a move which helped avert a major crisis over the arms sales issue at the meeting.

Smith was expected to get in touch with other countries on the committee when he returned to his headquarters in London.

In the House of Commons Wednesday, Sharp stated the Canadian government "does not intend to withdraw from the committee."

"We regret very much the decision of the British government to sell arms to South Africa. We also regret that the Nigeria government and others may consider it necessary to withdraw from this committee."

"After all, this will be an opportunity to discuss the very situation to which we object, and we think there could be a useful role for the committee."

'Very Plain'

An opposition member, Conservative Gordon Fairweather, asked whether Canada would protest Britain's "cynical abuse" of the Singapore agreement to set up the study committee.

"I am not defending the actions of the British government because they are not in accordance with our views," Sharp replied.

"Nevertheless, the British government made it very plain when they agreed to the formation of this committee that it would not necessarily delay any decision by them on the sale of arms to South Africa."

The government spokesman later noted that although no direct protests were made, copies of Sharp's remarks in the House of Commons Monday and Wednesday were sent to all Commonwealth capitals, including London.

Whistles Tax Her Patience

FRIMLEY, England (UPI) — Mrs. Mollie Collins, 34, has asked tax officials to reduce taxes on her house because of wolf whistles from workmen. When construction of a nearby highway began in 1968, her taxes were reduced by 49 per cent. But now officials have decided the nuisance caused by the construction is over and have increased the taxes by 20 per cent. Mrs. Collins is appealing the action on the grounds there is still a nuisance caused by wolf whistles from workmen building a footbridge over the highway.

LOS ANGELES — Attorney General John Mitchell says, nobody has asked him to run President Nixon's campaign for re-election in 1972 and "I sure as hell am not going to volunteer."

CINCINNATI — A Cincinnati woman has filed a $500,000 breach of promise suit against singer James Brown, contending he promised to marry her, then wed another woman in October, 1970. Lavetta Clay, 23, alleged in the suit that Brown's conduct with her was "ruthless, abrupt, humiliating, wanton, wilful and malicious."

Rose, Laporte Prints Found on Ransom Note

MONTREAL (CP) — Fingerprints of Paul Rose and Pierre Laporte were found on a ransom note issued last October by the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec, an RCMP fingerprint expert testified Wednesday.

Sgt. Lloyd Dunham of Ottawa said he was able to identify the prints of both Laporte, kidnapped Quebec labor minister, and Rose, one of four men charged with abducting him Oct. 10 and strangling him Oct. 17.

Sgt. Dunham, 38, a 17-year veteran of the RCMP, was testifying in the fifth week of Rose's trial on a non-capital murder charge.

The fingerprint expert said he found the prints on a ransom note found in Montreal Sunday, Oct. 11, the day after the labor minister was kidnapped.

Fingerprints of reporters who had discovered and handled the note were also detected.

Sgt. Dunham was still testifying when Mr. Justice

Marcel Nichols adjourned the trial until today.

Earlier, another RCMP expert testified that four of eight FLQ "communiques" relating to the Laporte kidnapping were typed on the same machine and the same type of paper.

Sgt. Lionel Lepage said the typing of the four FLQ messages matched the typing on scraps of paper found in a bungalow in suburban St. Hubert, where police say the abducted labor minister was held for a week.

B.C.'s Forest Leader Suffers Big Profit Drop

A drop of 60 per cent in its net earnings is reported by MacMillan Bloedel for 1970, which its chairman J. V. Clyne describes as the most difficult post-war year for the company and the Canadian forest industry generally. Net earnings of $17,425,816 (83 cents a share) for B.C.'s No. 1 forest firm were down from $42,550,721 ($2.04) a year earlier, despite higher sales, which rose to $651,101,304 from $644,465,773.

The net figure was reached after deduction of $48,200,000 for depreciation and depletion, slightly more than the $47,000,000 deducted in 1969. Income tax liabilities, however, fell sharply to $17,600,000 from $41,900,000 a year earlier.

Clyne said loss of production through strikes and lower prices for lumber products contributed to the disappointing earnings. The unpegging of the Canadian dollar also had a depressing effect on profits from export sales.

For 1971, Clyne said the problems of higher costs and loss on dollar exchange would carry on, but there were some signs of improvement in wood product prices while the increase in the price of newsprint which came into effect Jan. 1 would improve the chances of higher earnings during the year.

The 1970 earnings per share of 83 cents did not cover the company's dividend payments which amounted to $1 in four quarterly payments of 25 cents. Another 25 cents has been declared for payment on March 15.

A spokesman for the company said he had no information on the company's future dividend policy, adding any announcement would not likely come until after the annual general meeting.

MANNA FOR SOME

Earlier Wednesday, interest prices started dropping like manna from heaven in the wake of the Bank of Canada's cut in the rediscount rate, its second in 10 days.

But while the manna for some was a fattening diet, for others it slimmed the pickings.

Most of the banks have dropped their prime rate to 6 1/2 per cent from 7 per cent to the relief of their borrowers, but at the same time they cut the rate by one half of 1 per cent to 4 1/2 per cent on the amount they are paying on savings deposits, which discomferts their lenders.

The Toronto-Dominion, which last week cut its rate to 6 1/2 per cent, made another similar cut to restore its balance with the others at 6 1/2 per cent.

The Bank of British Columbia, which has instituted itself as a sort of pacemaker in the game of interest-juggling, went one stage further than its older and bigger rivals.

Benson, Hees Clash On New Bank Rate

OTTAWA (CP) — Shouting broke out in the Commons Wednesday over who is responsible for lowering the Bank of Canada interest rate charged for infrequent loans to the chartered banks.

After Finance Minister Edgar Benson told Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield that Tuesday's reduction in the central bank's rate to 5 1/2 per cent from 5 per cent was made because the governor of the bank and the government felt short-term interest rates should be lower, George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) asked who made the decision.

Benson began his reply by referring to the highly-publicized 1961 dispute between then Conservative finance minister Donald Fleming and James Coyne, the Bank of Canada governor, which resulted in Coyne's resignation.

Then he went on to suggest that Hees read the Bank Act, which he said places the ultimate responsibility with the minister of finance.

It sliced a bigger chunk off its prime lending rate, dropping it to 6 1/2 per cent.

Elsewhere in the money market IAC, one of the leading finance companies, announced cuts. IAC paper will pay only 5 1/2 per cent for periods up to three months; 5 1/4 per cent up to six months; and 5 1/2 per cent up to a year.

Little more than a year ago, IAC and other borrowers were paying 8 1/2 per cent and 9 per cent for short-term funds.

Further, the Royal Bank of Canada said its new rate for NHA mortgage loans was dropping to 8 1/2 per cent from 9 1/2 per cent, while its conventional home loans would be marketed at 9 1/2 per cent instead of 9 3/4 per cent.

That is why investors are showing no inclination to lend money on the long term at anything but high yields. The 9-per-cent level, currently popular with corporation bond investors, is regarded as a comparatively safe hedge against inflation.

Beyond that, nothing doing. Bank of Canada and the

He said: "Why don't you tell the truth?"

Later Benson said it was the decision of the governor of the Bank. If the government had disagreed with the decision the ultimate responsibility lies with the minister of finance.

The Bank of Canada lowered its bank rate, the interest charged to chartered banks, 1/2 per cent over the past ten days, down to 5 1/2 per cent, the lowest rate since 1967.

Following the announcement a number of chartered banks Wednesday announced 1/2 per cent reductions in their prime lending rates and interest rates on savings accounts, effective next Monday.

The government also announced Wednesday it was withdrawing the 1970-71 series of Canada savings Bonds, effective March 5; they were expected to be replaced with a new issue with a lower effective interest rate.

Wheat Agreement Disappoints Lang

OTTAWA (UPI) — Despite the lack of a pricing formula, Canada will sign a new three-year international wheat agreement, says Otto Lang, minister responsible for the wheat board.

In a report to Parliament on the international wheat conference held last month in Geneva, the minister said Wednesday he was disappointed with the new agreement which comes into effect July 1.

"The new agreement does not contain effective price provisions and is thus much less than we hoped for," he said.

"However, the agreement does provide for machinery to undertake consultations in the event of actual or threatened disturbances in market conditions, including price fluctuations.

"The object of such consultation would be to seek ways of restoring the market."

The new agreement also makes provision for a continuing review of wheat prices.

The long-term bond buyer, or the Canadian government's ability to keep inflation under control over a period of years.

The one phase of the money industry which apparently was not too impressed with the Bank of Canada shenanigans was the bond market.

Long-term bonds — government, provincial, municipal and corporation — were up on the day by nearly a point, but were still far below the levels they had reached early in January.

Fedorak Checks Bruins Mates Go Goal-Hunting

Getting the wide-open action at which they often excel, Victoria Cougars continued to close in on the Coast Division title in the B.C. Junior Hockey League by whipping New Westminster Royals, 10-5, on Wednesday night at New Westminster.

Result left Cougars, who still have a game in hand, 12 points ahead of Vancouver Centennials.

Could it be that the B.C. Junior Hockey League might yet develop into the junior "A" status it has claimed for several seasons? It's a lot to hope for in view of the fact there has been little reason in the past to have any hope, but there was at least the hint of something better on Tuesday when the BCJHL voted to sever its relationship with the Western Canada League and strike out on its own in an endeavor to produce a calibre junior league.

It is one of the few positive actions the BCJHL has managed since it expanded to take in the coast teams, and it remains to be seen if there is the vision and the courage, and the ability, to persevere.

There is little, if anything, in the past history of the BCJHL which can be termed encouraging. It has been a league so ineptly run that there was never any real chance it could ever attain its "A" billing, although it can be said that the calibre of the player has certainly improved. There not only has been no noticeable progress in the four seasons since expansion but a new low was reached this season with the decision to include all eight clubs in the playdowns.

This, and pardon the expression, is a bush-league play which breaks faith with fans because it makes nothing more than exhibition games out of the league schedule. League and club officials, a bit defiant but obviously without conviction, have attempted to defend the decision by saying it was necessary to keep some clubs solvent enough to think about carrying on for another season. Well, that kind of thinking will wreak attendance in the good areas without saving any of the financially weaker clubs. And, sort of emphasizing the reasoning which makes the BCJHL something to scoff at, the league plans to send the defeated playoff quarter-finalist with the best record to the inter-provincial playdowns.

It's been disappointing. When Victoria and Vancouver were added to the Okanagan clubs to form the BCJHL, there was reason to believe that the league would evolve, perhaps slowly but surely, into a class organization. However, the Okanagan clubs remained parochial in their thinking and no leadership developed on the coast. It looked for a while as if the Victoria-owned Cougars might provide it but the owners quailed at the task, took the chance to get out at a healthy profit and forgot about the high-sounding ideals they professed to have when the club organized.

The chance to make something out of the BCJHL has always been there but parochialism and lack of leadership talent have always prevailed. The logical way would be to confine the league to the four Okanagan cities and Vancouver and Victoria and to restore the age limit to 21 years and permit the use of 22-year-olds still attending university.

That was largely what made something out of the WCHL, enabling it to offer a high calibre of play to its fans.

However, the move was too daring for the uncertain who made up most of the decision-makers in the BCJHL. It would have meant earning the disfavor of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association. And that in turn could have meant the loss of the CAHA grant, made possible by the deal with the National Hockey League to reduce the junior age limit to 20 years. To the weak-kneed in the BCJHL, that was cash in hand and it didn't register very loudly that an extra 150 paying fans per game, not much to expect from the improved hockey a more realistic age limit would produce, would more than make up for the loss of the CAHA grant.

On top of that, there was the omniscient (omnious?) presence, at least to those in the BCJHL who could have been expected to provide leadership, of the WCHL and its experienced junior hockey promoters such as Sooty Munro and Bill Hunter and their front man, Ron Butlin.

Quite aware of the population shift and the fact that dozens of artificial ice surfaces have been made available in B.C. during the past decade, the WCHL, admittedly looking on B.C. as a future source of talent, had infiltrated the BCJHL. And Hunter, Munro and Butlin were there at the annual meeting last spring to sort of direct traffic.

The result could be termed unconditional surrender. Victoria and Vancouver and New Westminster were given the crumb of being allowed over-age players while other BCJHL clubs entered into agreements with WCHL clubs which were designed to see that the WCHL would acquire the best BCJHL talent. The WCHL had, temporarily, succeeded in its plan of keeping the BCJHL an inferior league by milking it of its better players through agreements which left the BCJHL no more than an organization composed mainly of "feeder" clubs.

That left the future for Victoria and Vancouver depending on eventual acceptance into the WCHL. And it has been reported that WCHL plans call for the two clubs and, probably, Kamloops to become part of a Western Division which would include Calgary, Edmonton and Medicine Hat. A WCHL Eastern Division would be made up of Flin Flon, Winnipeg, Brandon, Saskatoon, Regina and probably, Swift Current.

And there was the rub. The WCHL would make the decision on whether Victoria and Vancouver would be deemed to an inferior, badly-run league or be permitted to join the WCHL, which would make that move only when it served its interests.

But, hopefully, the worm has finally turned — and not much too soon for the Cougars, who have always provided good entertainment but whose future has been clouded because they had nowhere to play except a league which never really got off the rocks. Perhaps the BCJHL, which has clubs in Kelowna and Kamloops owned by owners of WCHL Clubs, won't be able to make it stick but what happened Tuesday was at least a strong sign of rebellion.

Riddell got the score to 4-1 before the second period ended and the Cougars were 8-1 leaders before Margets got a second power-play goal.

CHARGE GOALKEEPERS
Royals took starter Terry Richardson out of their goal after Askew and Little had scored goals 15 seconds apart to run the Victoria lead to 7-1.

Maurice L'Hercure took over and was a 3-4 winner in the last half of the game but the Cougars eased off in the last period, content to sit on their comfortable lead.

Despite the wide-open action, Victoria's Ted Plowe could manage only an assist and gained no ground in the individual point race.

TRAILS BY TWO
The scoring pace, 46th of the season, boosted Plowe to 96 points but he remained two points behind Vernon's Jim Lawrence, who scored the only goal for Essos in a 5-1 beating by Kamloops Rockets in Wednesday's other game.

However, Chris Riddell moved into a third-place tie with Penitents' Vic Merced by scoring Cougars' 4-1 and 8-1 goals and drawing an assist. Riddell has 82 points, 33 of them goals.

Victory for the Rockets boosted them within six points of the Okanagan Division lead, moved by Penitents Broncos, and moved them four points ahead of Essos.

Gerry Holland, getting the 2-0 and 3-0 goals, was the only player to score more than once.

Terry Tarnow opened the scoring and Gary Howatt ran the score to 4-0 before Jim Lawrence Jim Evans' shutout bid late in the second period.

Tim Peck got the Rockets' final goal.

COUGARS OUTSHOT
With Fedorak playing extremely well, the Cougars were able to continue in their goal hunting, free-wheeling action.

Royals had a 55-32 edge in shots on goal in the first two periods and a 17-6 edge in the final 20 minutes, by which time they were 3-8 trailers.

Greg Robinson opened the scoring and Scott Munro and Gerry Bond, on a power play, gave Cougars a 3-0 lead.

Fedorak yielded a power-play goal to Bill Margets but Chris

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (AP) — Kay Baldwin's Alberta rink scored three wins Wednesday to break out of a four-way tie for the lead after seven rounds of the Canadian women's curling championship.

Alberta topped to a 12-3 win over New Brunswick in the fifth round, then after squaring by Newfoundland, 9-7, on an extra end, thumped defending-champion Saskatchewan, 11-4.

Mabel Mitchell of Brandon, representing Manitoba, won two of her three games to finish the day alone in second place with a 5-2 record.

Mrs. Mitchell lost, 7-9, in fifth-round play but came back with a 13-5 win over Nova Scotia and a 9-4 victory over Prince Edward Island.

Five rinks, Saskatchewan, Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland, Ontario and B.C. share third place with 4-3 records.

Ina Hansen of Kimberley earned her share of third with wins over Saskatchewan and Quebec against a loss to Ontario.

The B.C.-Saskatchewan was one of the toughest and best-curved of the bantams, ironically ending when Mrs. Hansen came out wide with her final rock and instead of getting a tap up on her own rock, slipped by and removed the Saskatchewan shot rock for a 3-2 victory. Five ends were blanked with B.C. scoring on the third and seventh ends and Saskatchewan on the sixth and eighth.

Eighth and ninth rounds will be played this afternoon and evening and if a playoff is required, games are scheduled for 9:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Friday.

Jockey Club Arranges Rich Race

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Jockey Club announced Wednesday that it has joined with Macdonald's Tobacco Co. to give Vancouver the richest race in Canada for fillies and mares.

Each party will put up half of the $30,000 purse for the Export Stakes, to be run at Exhibition Park Oct. 9 over a distance of 1 1/2 miles. The race, which will not be restricted to Canadian-breds, will be the richest at Exhibition Park, surpassing the B.C. Derby by $5,000.

The Canadian Oaks, run at Woodbine in Ontario, also carries a $30,000 purse, but is restricted to three-year-old fillies bred in Canada.

Betsy Clifford Second

SOUTH LAKE TAHOE, Calif. (AP) — Barbara Ann Cochran, 20, of Richmond, Vt., won the women's slalom Wednesday, the opening event in the World Cup slalom races at Heavenly Valley.

Betsy Clifford, 17, of Ottawa, finished second and tied Britt Lafforgue of France for first place in slalom points, with 70 each. The only women's events remaining in the Cup series are three giant slaloms.

In over-all World Cup standings, Miss Lafforgue is seventh with 92 points and Miss Clifford eighth with 76.

Austria's Anne Marie Proell, 17, finished third, increasing her lead in World Cup women's standings over Michele Jacot of France, who was disqualified Wednesday.

Miss Cochran moved into the top 10 in the women's standings, increasing her point total from 55 to 65?

trouncing from Saskatchewan's Burley Townsend on Wednesday night.

Moore, running away from Nova Scotia in the afternoon by scoring the first 12 points of a 12-2 game, had won five in a row. Defeat left him tied with Harry Coles of Quebec, who lost his first game when he couldn't handle Dr. Wendell MacDonald of Prince Edward Island in the afternoon draw.

RIGHT BEHIND

Right behind B.C. and Quebec are Saskatchewan and Prince Edward Island, both at 4-1. Alberta and Ontario are also in challenging position, both having lost only twice.

Dr. MacDonald, making his seventh successive appearance in the final, stole the show Wednesday with two crucial victories.

He started by handing Quebec its first defeat, breaking a 10-7 game open with a three on the ninth end, then followed up by knocking Alberta's Stu Pearce into fifth place.

Pearce had a bad day, taking a 14-8 beating from Rudy Steski of Northern Ontario in the afternoon draw.

Missed Flight Proves Costly

WINNIPEG — The University of Victoria team got off to a bad start when play opened Wednesday in the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association men's curling championships here.

Two Victoria players arrived late because of a missed flight connection and the rink was assessed four penalty points — one for each 15 minutes delay — in a first round game against Regina. The Victoria rink was then beaten, 10-1 in the game.

However, UVic's representatives made up for it in the second round, scoring a 10-3 win over the University of Manitoba.

University of Winnipeg was the only one of 10 teams to emerge undefeated after the first day's play. The Winnipeg rink, skipped by Byrne McKay, defeated Brandon University, 9-6, then beat University of Saskatchewan's Regina campus, 9-7.

Viets 'Nice'—Calley

FT. BENNING, Ga. (UPI)—The defence rested its case Wednesday in the murder court-martial of Lt. William Calley just one minute after Calley completed his eight-hour-long tale of the massacre at My Lai.

Three-and-a-half of those hours Calley spent under cross-examination, by prosecutor Anthony Daniel, who drew from Calley the admission he executed civilians at My Lai, but did not consider it any "big deal."

In his last statement before stepping down, Calley said he found the Vietnamese he met in government controlled areas to be "very nice people. Very wonderful people."

Calley kept his composure throughout the day and a half of probing by Daniel, but at times his voice faltered and he gnawed uneasily at his lips. Calley is accused of murdering, or ordering his men to murder, 102 South Vietnamese civilians during an American infantry sweep through My Lai on March 16, 1968.

He has based his entire defence on the contention that whatever he did during the operation, he did on the direct orders of his superior, Capt. Ernest Medina, who is under investigation to determine whether he too should stand court-martial for the My Lai affair.

Defence attorney George

Latimer brought Calley under brief re-direct examination after Daniel stepped aside. Some rebuttal witnesses for the prosecution remain to be called.

U.S. Agents Nab 52 In Narcotics Raid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. federal agents using wiretaps and undercover infiltrators arrested 54 persons in New York, Chicago, Hartford and New Orleans early Wednesday in a co-ordinated assault on wholesalers in heroin.

Attorney General John Mitchell, who announced the raids at a justice department news conference, said they were part of "the largest federal crackdown ever on narcotics distribution by organized crime," a five-month operation that's still under way.

So far, he said, the raids have netted 71 pounds of heroin, 49 pounds of cocaine and 250 pounds of marijuana with a street sale value of $12.8 million. In addition, he said, $431,341 in cash, 78 guns and 35 automobiles have been seized.

Mitchell termed the operation "an unqualified success" which would have been impossible without the use of 12 court-approved wiretaps authorized by the crime control act of 1968.

Mitchell said the raids have netted 143 defendants since Operation Flanker began.

Rema Need

WINNIPEG (CP) — J. Borowski, Manitoba's blunt-spoken minister of highway and public works who stirred up a storm with reports about Indian war veterans, remains a member of the provincial government.

Premier Ed Schreyer emerged from a lengthy cabinet meeting Wednesday to tell reporters he accepted clarifying statements issued by his colleague and was satisfied reports of the minister's statements had been taken out of context. "I feel any further criticism against Mr. Borowski becomes unnecessary," said the premier. "I was not asking for his resignation nor was I inclined to accept it."

Former Miner

Borowski, a 37-year-old former miner and bus worker, left the meeting before the lunch adjournment and told reporters he had offered his resignation for the cabinet to act on if it saw fit. He would not apologize, he said. He has maintained a long that no apology was necessary because he had not been derogatory to anyone in his address to an NDP constituency association meeting in the Winnipeg riding of Wellington last week.

In his statement, released to reporters, he spoke of "the difficulties I have had to undergo in attempting to adjust to the strange conventions of political behaviour expected from a man in public life."

"I now find that I am faced with making the decision continuing as a member of the government in the face of what I consider to be a situation where I am asked to make an accommodation which is not justified by events."

In his speech, he was reported as saying Indian can work up to 18 hours a day during the fishing season but are hard to get up in the morning and this hinders their integration into the routine of industrial society.

'On a Drunk'

He also was reported as saying that Indians employed on government bush-clearing projects in the north are given every fourth week off at which time they visit their families, buy groceries and go on a drunk.

He also discussed the case of a legislature security guard, suspended for five days over a missing master key which later turned up anonymously in the mail, and said the man might have been dismissed by any other employer.

He was quoted as saying he had received criticism for not firing the guard because the "man is 70 per cent disabled. What kind of security can we get from a person who is crippled because of the war?"

Said Borowski in his statement: "I don't think that anyone in Manitoba considers me to be either a racist or an enemy of war veterans. Nevertheless, certain people have chosen to seize on certain remarks attributed to me as being evidence of both these qualities . . ."

Whites, Too

"As far as the Indian people are concerned, I let my record speak for itself. I have said they get drunk — the same as white people do. Perhaps there are some who believe that the rest of us are entitled to get drunk but look down on the drunk when he is an Indian — I don't."

"I could have said some Indians get drunk, but I didn't. Perhaps it is because I don't have any less regard for the Indian who certainly has more than enough cause to frustrate him to a drunk every once in a while than I do for the Indian who stays completely sober. I don't feel negative towards any of them. But I did generalize and perhaps it would be better that all of us stop generalizing."

On war veterans: "I indicated they were mistreated and are not being properly recognized by society for the sacrifice they made in the war."

Remarks on Indians Need 'No Apology'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Joe Borowski, Manitoba's blunt-spoken minister of highways and public works who stirred up a storm with reported remarks about Indians and war veterans, remains a member of the provincial government.

Premier Ed Schreyer emerged from a lengthy cabinet meeting Wednesday to tell reporters he accepted a clarifying statement issued by his colleague and was satisfied reports of the minister's statements had been taken out of context.

On war veterans: "I indicated they were mistreated and are not being properly recognized by society for the sacrifice they made in the war."

"I said it should not be necessary for them to be put on a job which they could not be expected to handle and if they were properly pensioned they would not be forced to work."

The statement added the disabled veteran wants to make a contribution to society rather than just live on a pension, and many do.

"I indicated that there was a difference of opinion as to the kind of duties certain disabilities would prevent a person from doing. It is true that there is a difference between myself and others as to the kind of duties required in certain positions. That difference is legitimate but it does not make me an enemy of disabled veterans."

Tax Revisions Delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — Government sources say that Finance Minister Edgar Benson's definitive proposals for revision of federal tax law will not be introduced in the Commons before May.

This represents a month's delay from the schedule the government had a few weeks ago. It was then stated the tax-law changes could not be introduced before the end of March, but might come in April or May.

The plan will be introduced in the Commons with a budget speech, triggering a six-day general debate before the tax law amending bill itself is introduced formally.

But thought is being given to releasing the full text of the proposed new tax law at the same time as the budget speech.

Sweeping revision of the Income Tax Act is to be undertaken, including — for the first time in Canada — the taxing of capital gains as part of regular income.

Original proposals were made by Benson in a white paper issued in November, 1969. After they were minutely examined in Senate and Commons committees and discussed with the provinces and major organizations, the government began the job of assembling its definitive proposals.

What makes a good marriage?

There are an infinite number of answers! Many will be discussed on "The Human Journey: Marriage." This informative and stimulating TV Special was commissioned by London Life and can be seen this Sunday, February 28th, on the CTV network. It is a program of interest to everyone.

"Marriage" is the second in The Human Journey series produced especially for Canadian viewers at the request of the London Life Insurance Company. It examines marriage in the past, present and future—and brings new insights into what makes a good marriage.

Whether you are single, engaged, married or divorced London Life believes it is a good idea to look at this institution of ours called marriage. It is a basic part of our way of life—and a part that seems to be undergoing some dramatic changes.

Thought-provoking research
Researchers spent over 3 months collecting opinions and filming interviews with psychologists, ministers, counselors, single and married people. To gather this material they travelled all across the North American continent.

You'll meet Jessie Bernard, an author well-known for her books on marriage. She'll tell you about some of the material she's collected for a new book on the future of marriage. A lively book that's based almost entirely on research and statistical surveys.

You'll also hear the results of a survey conducted among 1500 Canadians from coast to coast. Some of the questions in this survey are shown at the top of this advertisement.

Program highlights

- A fascinating history of marriage.
- A couple who lived together before finally getting married.
- What a divorcee with two children thinks is wrong with marriage—and how society pressures her to re-marry.
- The attitudes of young unmarried people as opposed to those of couples who have been married for some time.
- A marriage that's in trouble because of some very typical problems—but can be saved.
- How the church is attempting to produce better marriages in the first place.
- A scientific introduction service.
- Different methods of helping couples relate to each other.

Future of marriage

It appears that most people don't question the institution of marriage. But the nature of marriage is changing, and for many people it isn't changing fast enough. Where are we heading? The program offers some clues.

London Life believes it is important to examine the changes that have taken place and are likely to take place in the future. That's the reason for The Human Journey series of programs.

It is only by looking at what's happening in our social and cultural way of life that London Life can provide the kind of flexible insurance program that people want these days.

Free offer

London Life has published a special booklet based on material gathered for "Marriage".

They have also prepared another booklet which illustrates some of the financial needs that couples have to face initially, and throughout their married life.

PROVINCIAL COURT

The pre-sentence report of an admitted professional panhandler was "quite the most astonishing report I have ever read... it's just unbelievable," Judge William Ostler said Wednesday in Victoria Provincial Court.

He was speaking of Norman Matt Necemer, 24, no fixed address, who had been remanded to Wednesday for a pre-sentence report and sentence after pleading guilty Feb. 17 to a charge of possession of hashish — 19 grams found in a plastic bag in his right sock when police checked him early the same day on Government near Fort.

The judge told Necemer the report read like a work of fiction. Necemer had been out of school for eight years, had "never been gainfully employed" and had "lived off the proceeds of professional panhandling."

Ostler added, "You are simply a drone and a wastrel and you are utterly amoral. You are sentenced to 45 days."

Donald Marlow Champion, 31, address not known, was committed by Ostler to a higher court for trial after he waived preliminary hearing on four Victoria charges. Bail was set at $2,500, pending the higher court hearing.

One charge contained four counts of possession all dated "on or about" Jan. 11, the items named including dynamite, nitro, music tapes and two acetylene tanks.

The other charges alleged possession Oct. 11 of a stolen car, false pretences in the obtaining from a Victoria firm Nov. 27 of items worth $733 and false pretences in the obtaining from another Victoria firm Nov. 27 of items worth $682.

William Harold Mack, 22, address not known, was committed by Ostler to a higher court for trial after he waived preliminary hearing on a charge of possession of heroin "on or about" Feb. 16 in "Victoria." Bail was set at $2,000 pending the hearing.

March 26 was set as trial date for Paul Watson, 23, of Vancouver, on a charge of assault causing bodily harm to George MacKay Jan. 21 in Victoria. MacKay, a former RCMP superintendent, was cut during a melee at the opening of the present B.C. legislature session.

In traffic court, Judge Edmund Jorre de St. Jorre ordered a $300 fine and a three-month driving ban for Lawrence Albert Hewitt, 15, of 385 Stannard, who pleaded guilty Tuesday to a charge of impaired driving Jan. 26 in Victoria.

Karl Both, 48, of 664 Granderson, pleaded guilty to a charge of impaired driving and refusing to take a breathalyzer test Jan. 22 in the Colwood area. He was fined $300 and given a partial four-month driving ban on the first count and fined $200 on the second.

There will be initiation of candidates and address by the Provincial President. This will be followed by a social evening to which the ladies are invited.

Musical Gifts Lighten Stay

The 62 profoundly retarded and physically handicapped children in Royal Jubilee Hospital's Eric Martin Institute now have music and other sounds to lighten their long hospital stay.

Victoria Kiwanis Club has given the children, who occupy EMI's fifth floor, four transistor radios, a record player and a collection of records.

C. A. Brown, administrator of EMI, said many of the children respond to music, especially percussion sound.

"The radios and record player have been well-received by the children, especially those who are not in the main area and are in side-rooms," he added.

Portraits of Nature Will Tour Island

Portraits of Nature, an exhibition of 100 black and white and color photographs of B.C. by North Vancouver photographer William Dekur, will be shown in Victoria from July 6 to 10.

Other Vancouver Island areas to be visited by the exhibition as part of Centennial '71 celebrations are: Campbell River, June 24, 25; Courtenay, June 26, 27; Port Alberni, June 29 to July 1; Nanaimo July 2 to 4. Dekur will tour with the collection in a van especially equipped to carry the exhibition.

Jail, After Soul-Searching

Duty comes ahead of "personal inclination" for a judge, Victoria Provincial Court Judge William Ostler said Wednesday, and that meant detention for a 16-year-old Saanich youth whose case had occupied his thoughts for most of the previous 24 hours.

The case of Daniel Charles O'Sullivan, 16, of 1248 Tolmie, was unique for two reasons:

● His probation officer, William Foster, came to court Tuesday to ask for leniency despite the fact O'Sullivan had already served two terms in adult institutions.

● The judge spoke at unusual length to explain to O'Sullivan why the sentence could not be probation but had to be detention.

O'Sullivan was raised Tuesday to adult court from juvenile court and pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking and entering Feb. 21 at a home at 2710 Shelbourne and theft there of $11 cash and items worth more than $400.

Foster explained O'Sullivan was trying to pay off a $100 debt from a time when he used drugs. He said other individuals were prepared to help pay the debt, O'Sullivan had a job now and "I have the feeling I can make significant steps with this lad."

O'Sullivan said he wanted to get drugs "out of my life completely 'cause I know it's not taking me anywhere."

Ostler decided to think about it for a day and then told O'Sullivan Wednesday "it might be useful to you to know you have occupied a considerable portion of my thoughts since yesterday."

He said deciding sentences in such cases was a "most difficult" part of a judge's job.

On the one hand, he said, was the "sincerity and ability" of the probation officer and Ostler's belief in O'Sullivan's statement that he will not commit any more crimes. But on the other was the aspect of deterrence and the basic nature of a judge's work.

"To permit you to get away with it would simply embolden others," the judge told O'Sullivan, "and make a mockery of the law... and be an abdication of my responsibilities."

He said his "personal inclination" was leniency but that would be "wrong in principle, wrong from the public's point of view and wrong for you."

The judge said he was sorry but, because of a "very bad record for a very young boy," detention was the answer — a "very short term" of four months definite and 12 months indeterminate in the Haney Correctional Institute.

"I hope when you get out next time, you make a real effort," Ostler said.

Pipeline Offer News to Sharp

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp says he has not received any offer from the United States on a co-operative effort to build an oil pipeline from Alaska.

David Anderson (L—Esquimalt-Saanich) asked whether the U.S. has made such an offer, as reported by the Toronto Telegram Monday.

"If they have," said the minister in the Commons Wednesday, "they have not made the offer to me."

He also said that the U.S. has not yet replied formally to a letter written by Sharp suggesting Canadian-U.S. consultations on the method to be used in transporting Alaska oil to the U.S. West Coast.

He said that American officials have suggested they will consult their Canadian counterparts on the form of these consultations.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — The social and economic impact of the proposed trans-Alaska oil pipeline far outweighs any negative effect on the environment, Alaska officials told U.S. interior department examiners Wednesday.

Gov. William Egan and commissioners of state departments repeatedly emphasized the need for the pipeline to alleviate poverty, unemployment, health and education problems of the state.

Their testimony, in the second phase of the pipeline environment impact hearings, contrasted with the predominantly anti-pipeline conservationists' view presented at the initial hearings in Washington, D.C., last week.

State commissioner of economics and development Irene Ryan said improving social conditions requires economic ability.

"Outsiders can expound until doomsday their feeling and desire to preserve Alaska for colorful nature books and as a monument to nature. But do they have the right to force that decision upon others to live in degradation and poverty within scenic beauty but without the opportunity for self-improvement?" she asked.

Mrs. Ryan discounted the alternative of routing the pipeline through Canada. She said it would have to cross extensive areas of permafrost resulting in higher construction costs and pass over many more rivers and streams.

Pay as You Play

A Central Saanich farmer suggested Wednesday night that people who want to enjoy pastoral scenes will have to pay for them, possibly by contributing to a fund that would buy farms and lease them to operators.

William Taylor, who has a herd of 300 dairy cattle at 2973 MacIntyre, told a meeting organized by a group of architects:

"There is no reason why I should turn my back on my life's investment. We farmers are not prepared to turn around and walk away. If you want farms, they will have to be preserved by some action of the government or the group that enjoys such scenery."

Taylor was in an audience of about 100 who attended a meeting organized by the Vancouver Island Chapter, Architectural Institute of B.C. The topic was Project Peninsula and it was chosen to stimulate discussion about where the Greater Victoria area would accommodate the one or two million persons who might live there within 50 years.

Perpetuity

Earlier in the day, Taylor explained, he was with a group from the B.C. Federation of Agriculture that presented a brief to the Legislature's standing committee on agriculture. The brief suggested farm land be dedicated as such for perpetuity. However, he pointed out to the meeting in the Empress there were some contradictions.

The chairman of the BCFA committee that prepared the brief had his farm expropriated by the B.C. government for the Roberts Banks superport. He was paid $750,000 and now is leasing it from the government at $50 an acre annually. The man was not named.

Architect Ben Levinson said the problems went beyond transit service that operated in 10-minute frequencies with fares of 10 cents for standing room would be possible. It could have a fare schedule that would allow a passenger to be seated for 25 cents, use a compartment for 50 cents and a compartment with a telephone for 55 cents.

With Phone

"Why not a compartment with a phone and a drink for $1?"

Levinson also made reference to "farms, sitting there, unimproved, waiting to be subdivided."

"I beg your pardon," shouted Brian Hoole, a Saanich farmer who lives at 5675 Oldfield Road.

R. W. Smeeth, another architect, said living in the Greater Victoria area was gentle and "very rare for this hemisphere." However, the architects that were at the meeting were not proposing any simple methods of preserving the environment and "we're not here as planners or economists."

Smeeth said one answer to the problem of plugging street with cars and covering the countryside with subdivisions might be in developing independent communities of 100,000 population, many of whom would live in medium and high-density structures. "Rather than flocking to simply preserving the environment — they involved preserving a quality of life.

'Preserve Quality Of Life'

He wondered whether two-layered streets might ease the issue of finding room for cars. Already one-third of Victoria's physical area is roads.

Traffic travelling in two layers would make more green space available, allow for such things as bicycle paths and possibly even improvements in the transit service, Levinson said. He wondered whether a come... and when they get here, they have to be able to enjoy the same thing as we do now."

Architect H. C. Charlesworth said that before a satisfactory solution might be arrived at, the right questions must be asked.

"We may even find that after asking the right questions, we may be able to improve the environment. We must progress but we must ask questions as to the direction of the progress, as to whether it will be desirable to the people living in the area."

Charlesworth explained that many of his acquaintances had chosen the Victoria area for their homes because of their infatuation with the environment.

Certain Way

"This part of the world gives us a certain way of life that is very satisfying. We must then ask what are the priorities, what are the values, and we look around and find many people have the same outlook," he added.

"We are not here as statisticians, planners or economists — not even magicians. We are here as people to seek some approach to preserving this environment."

Architects, said Charlesworth, are basically trained in the sciences "with a liberal sprinkling of the confusion of technology."

One of the principles of science is the art of discovery and he said he hoped the community would join the architects in first making an analysis of problems and coming to solutions.

'No Simple Method Proposed'

Bay, bring a population of about 200 persons to each acre.

"One hundred persons on an acre is not an atrocious thing — they are not necessarily crammed together," he added.

He said the architects, when they discussed a topic for the meeting, felt Greater Victoria would attract many more persons with the same interests as those who now live in the area. "We have to allow them to

UVic Psychology Experiment

Phony Complaint Letters Arouse Business Wrath

The manager of the Victoria Better Business Bureau had harsh words Wednesday for the University of Victoria after a psychology professor had his class send phony letters of complaint to several local businesses.

"There were approximately 45 students and each sent out a number of letters, so there were probably a minimum of 100 sent out," said Bill Tindall, of the Better Business Bureau.

Tindall said the letters which were taken from form examples provided by psychology professor, Dr. Lorne Rosenbloom, included three types ranging from "nice" through "harsh" to those threatening to report the establishment of regulatory agencies.

Apologies Sent

Rosenbloom told the Colonist that letters of apology and explanation had already been sent out to all that had received complaints from his students.

"I'd just like to forget about it," Rosenbloom told the Colonist. "Perhaps we should not have used the most severe criticism."

Rosenbloom explained that the purpose of the assignment was to determine the best manner of obtaining favorable results when writing letters of complaint.

The quick response that was received, he said, indicated the degree of concern the firms have for their products.

Cheques, Too

"A number requested we send the product back and others have sent cheques to replace them. The cheques have been returned to the companies," he said.

Tindall said, "Here are the people in the business community supporting fund-raising drives for the university and then having the confidence of their customers undermined like this."

"It is atrocious," Tindall said. "This is a terrible situation to foster among business people."

'Profiteers'

The letters of complaint contained phrases such as "profiteers like you"; "shoddy merchandise"; "garbage like this"; and "lying about it (quality) in your advertising," said Tindall.

"This was extremely short-sighted on the part of the instructor," Tindall said. "The university must have some sort of public relations man or liaison with the community to give them some sort of advice."

"Our intention is to make a report and lodge a protest with the administration of the university."

Tindall said that although some of the letters referred to reporting an establishment to the Better Business Bureau, the agency was not even forewarned of the experiment.

He said the situation would have been quite different if the study had actually been directed at firms providing shoddy merchandise or service instead of indiscriminately as was done.

"That way it might have had some value," he said. "But this way, all they're doing is inviting a belligerent attitude from some business people."

Eric Lewis, owner of Big Louie's Drive-In, said he was one of those who received a letter telling him he should be ashamed of himself for selling junk and then lying about it in advertisements.

Hate Mail?

"I wonder how they can get away with this when there are laws on the books preventing sending hate literature," Lewis said.

Lewis said he thought incidents such as this would pull the "already pretty low" image of UVic "just a little bit lower."

Frank Whyte, of the Mello-Spot Drive-In, echoed Lewis' suggestion that the university would suffer from this sort of "not very well thought out" exercise.

"We probably won't be very liberal when someone comes around for a donation," Whyte said. "It's kind of an underhanded thing to do to someone who is in business."

Bill Webb, president of the Vancouver Island branch of the Canadian Restaurant Association, said the association's directors have been discussing the incident and will probably issue a statement Thursday.

Strike Vote Expected At Dockyard

Some 1,200 naval dockyard workers in Esquimalt will take a strike vote, probably next week, following rejection Wednesday of a federal treasury board wage offer.

Tom Graham, West Coast president of the federal government Dockyard, Trades and Labor Council, said in an interview strike votes will be held both in Esquimalt and Halifax unless a "meaningful" wage offer is made.

The council is made up of some 11 individual trade unions with a combined membership of about 3,000 — 1,200 of them working in Esquimalt.

The council's contract expired Oct. 1, 1970, and talks have continued since that time.

Graham said the treasury board had offered West Coast workers a 42-cent increase, compared with 27 cents offered their counterparts on the east coast.

"At the moment they are 85 cents behind the West Coast workers — this offer was an absolute insult," said Graham.

He said the offer was rejected by workers on both coasts by a combined vote of 95 per cent.

Graham said the union and the treasury board had just completed a conciliation board sitting, which had recommended increases of 42 cents for the West Coast and 37 for the east.

A minority report had recommended 34 and 27-cent increases, noted Graham, and the treasury board had combined both recommendations in its offer.

He said the rejection vote in Esquimalt was an unselfish move in support of the eastern workers.

At the same time, he said, workers were aware of the need for unity between the eastern and western parts of the union.

"If we allow this union to be split asunder by these wage offers, then we'll be anybody's patsies," said Graham.

"This is really a fight for survival as one union on a national basis."

He said Halifax workers are already organizing their strike vote, and it is hoped the Esquimalt vote will coincide.

Also at issue in the dispute, said Graham, are the fringe benefits such as annual and statutory holidays, severance pay and overtime rates.

Trunk Sewers Possible Without Voter Approval

The Capital Regional Board now has the power to build trunk sewers and disposal facilities in unorganized areas without asking for voter's approval.

The amended letters patent was presented to the board at a regular Wednesday meeting. The change had been requested by the board. Areas affected are View Royal, Langford, Colwood, Metchoshin and Sooke.

Board chairman Hugh Curtis said the change will mean that provision for the outlying districts can be built into all new facilities, providing sufficient capacity for future years.

He pointed out voter's approval will still be needed before laterals are installed. Laterals are the street sewage pipes to which houses are connected.

Present sewer installations, he said, are designed to provide for population growth up until the year 2015.

"To put major pipe in the ground without the capacity for areas not yet in the system would surely be foolish," he said.

The change will not apply to the Gulf Islands, including Salt Spring Island, which are still excluded from the board's sewer program.

In other business the board: Agreed to take over responsibility for the Finerty Cove outfall from Saanich and undertook to start oceanographic studies as soon as possible.

Appointed an ad hoc committee to study the regionalization of social services, with Ald. Edith Gunning as chairman.

Set March 15 as the date for a public hearing into rezoning three properties as campground zones. The hearing will be held in Elizabeth Fisher junior high school.

Authorized secretary-treasurer Dennis Young to apply for a $750,000 loan from the federal "make-work" program, for the Colwood-Landford ice arena and recreational centre.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: You goofed. The lady who said the romance had gone out of her marriage asked for help. You told her to put away her story books and accept the realities of life. You pointed out how much she had to be grateful for. You exhorted her to count her blessings.

You'll have to admit, Ann, her life sounded pretty darned dull. Why didn't you tell her to give that half-dead marriage a shot of adrenalin? There are many things a wife can do if she has the imagination. She can lose 10 pounds, get a new haircut, read a book, get a part-time job so she'll have something to talk about besides the broken dishwasher, the kid's report card, and her mother-in-law. Best of all, she can have a love affair — with her own husband. She can suggest they spend a night in a local hotel. And she can buy a black nightgown for the occasion. He'll look at her with new eyes.

If a wife acts like a household appliance, her husband will treat her like one. Every man wants a loveable, vibrant, exciting, fascinating woman. Be one! — Love Bird Who Sings A Lot.

Looks Still Count

VANCOUVER (CP) — A woman's face looks are just as important to her after marriage as before. Mr. Justice T. A. Dohm has ruled in awarding a British Columbia housewife $16,000 for scars left on her face as a result of a highway crash.

Precedent

The award was made to Kathleen Anne Wood of Haney, B.C., who received face injuries when the car in which she was riding with her husband was in a three-car collision Oct. 6, 1968 on Highway 401 in the Fraser Valley.

Erik William Wood, her husband, was awarded $6,610 for jaw and teeth injuries. The award was against John Simonson of Coquitlam, B.C., driver of one of the other two cars. Driver of the third vehicle was absolved of blame.

Her Right

"It is urged, as it always is in a law suit, that once a woman has legally married and has children, a scarred face is no longer of any great consequence in the assessment of damages," said the B.C. Supreme Court judge.

"I do not agree with this submission. Age, sex and marital status are factors. However, this plaintiff is young and was entitled, as is any female of any age, to live her life with the facial features with which she entered this life," said Mr. Justice Dohm.

About Mother Who?

"What in heaven's name is that hanging over your dirty clothes hamper?" asked mother. "It looks like a basketball hoop made out of a bent coat hanger."

"It's a basketball hoop made out of a bent coat hanger," I said.

"It looks terrible."

"That's easy for you to say," I said. "You don't have to run through dirty underwear in your bare feet or find the laundry before you can do it. When the boys improve on their hook shoots I'll have it made."

"What's this?" she scowled. "You mean that bar in the door you just cracked your head on? It's an exercise bar so the boys can build up their muscles."

"And this ironing board," she persisted, "don't you ever get tired of falling over it? Want me to take it down?"

"What for?" I asked. "We're not moving."

The trouble with mother is she has forgotten what it is like to live in a house furnished in "Contemporary Children." I used to fight it, too. At one time I was so naive I thought only edible things belonged in the refrigerator, bicycles without wheels should be discarded and if you had eight people to dinner, all the glasses had to match.

I went crazy, trying to keep an antiseptic house in a wet-shoeing world. Then one day I was doing cafeteria duty with a mother of six children, who said a curious thing. "I wonder how my kids will remember me? Will they remember me as a mother who never had rings around the bathtub or will they remember the popcorn we ate in the living room."

"Will they remember how many committees I chaired, or will they remember the fresh doughnuts in the kitchen after school?"

"Will they remember how cleverly I co-ordinated the blue in the sofa with the pillow cushions or will they remember I hung the outline of their hand in the living room like it was an original Renoir?"

"It's funny," she said. "I came from a large family and I can't even remember what color my bedroom was or if there was mud in the hallway or fingerprints around the light switches. All I can remember is the laughter, the love and a crazy basketball hoop my mother made out of a bent coat hanger and put over the clothes hamper."

I don't know how my kids will remember me. Only that the other day I knocked on the bathroom door and said, "It's your mother," and a voice said, "Mother who?"

National Leaders Treated To Lovely Performance

OTTAWA (CP) — National leaders sat beneath chandeliers in the sumptuous red-and-gold Confederation Room in the Parliament Buildings Wednesday and listened to a guitar-strumming brunette sing about love.

Beverly Weaver, 20, a third year nursing student at McGill University, was singing a song she had composed based on the famous scriptural chapter on love written by the apostle Paul—I Corinthians 13.

Parliamentarians, businessmen and other leaders attending the sixth annual National Prayer Breakfast listened quietly and applauded vigorously as Miss Weaver finished singing.

Miss Weaver said later she sings frequently at coffee houses, churches, hospitals and jails in Montreal.

Prime Minister Trudeau and Opposition Leader Robert

Stanfield read from the Old Testament and Governor-General Roland Michener gave a New Testament reading.

Commons Speaker Lucien Lamoureux welcomed the guests while New Democrat leader T. C. Douglas gave the invocation and Senator E. C. Manning the closing prayer.

Robert McCleave (PC-Hallifax East Hants) conducted the meeting.

Nina Gets Her Pelt

MOSCOW (UPI) — Izvestia said a woman worker at a weather station in northern Russia put her foot down when a fox tried to attack her.

Right on the fox's tummy. The government newspaper said Wednesday the woman, identified only as Nina K., "almost fainted" as she decided what to do next.

She picked up the fox by the scruff of the neck and carried it 300 yards to her office at the Norilsk weather station.

There, startled co-workers gingerly dispatched her "unexpected trophy."

Nina K. "at first thought the fox was just playing," Izvestia said. "But when she realized its intentions were aggressive, she put her foot down."

Nina K. capped the experience with a cup of tea and some smelling salts.

"The pelt will be a fitting reward for her courage," Izvestia said.

Leaning Habits Must Go First

By MARY SUE MILLER

A reader writes: What can I do to smooth and whiten my elbows? They feel like sandpaper and look grubby. I do not know why. They are not abused. I work at a desk all day and have been wearing long sleeves all winter.

Nothing helps, neither pumice stone nor hand lotion.

The answer: First off you have to break the habit of leaning on your elbows — leaning on your desk, the arms of chairs, table tops. You do lean, you know. Otherwise the skin would not be in such a fix.

Once the pressure's off, elbows respond to a variety of treatments:

● Cleanse the elbows with a firm brush and facial quality soap several times daily. Use a towel and massage in body lotion.

● To cleanse, dry elbows apply a scuff remover. This is a fluid cream, originally designed to create pretty feet from a mass of calloused spots. The action on the elbows is much the same. You simply rub it in until rough skin is loosened, when you whisk away particles. As only a little scuff comes away with each treatment, keep at it. At least three times a week.

● Pale the skin with a prepared skin bleach or a home-made lemon soak. But do avoid using either on the same day as scuff remover. For a soak, halve and hull out a lemon leaving a little pulp inside. Then oil your elbows and soak them in the cups for 15 minutes. Rinse pat dry and apply lotion.

It has been pretty well publicized that this is Thinking Week for Girl Guides and Boy Scouts, including Brownies and Sea Rangers. It is held all over the world where the movement is organized to commemorate the birthday of the founders, Lord Baden Powell and Lady Baden Powell, which was last Monday.

Thinking week takes place every year but this is a special year for the Sea Rangers — they come of age March 6. And the Ranger skipper, Lillian Warne, who launched the group 21 years ago, is still the skipper.

At the time the Sea Rangers had a membership of seven. The number has fluctuated since then but at no time has there been more than 24.

All former Rangers have been invited to the 21st birthday party. They will be coming from the mainland and up-Island, but only letters will come from Rangers now living in Switzerland, Australia and New Guinea.

There will be open house at the Guide Hall on Mason Street where old logbooks and other memorabilia will be on display. A smorgasbord will be held at Holyrood House in the evening.

One of the first things Rangers have to do is learn to swim as boating is, as their name signifies, a major part of their program. There is a whaler at Esquimalt that holds 20 persons and 10 of the girls can row at one time.

Every other year there is a trip to the B.C. lake country and 10 days are given over to canoeing on the lakes and sleeping, usually under the stars. But they do take tents along for protection when it rains, or in big-game country.

Lillian Warne is justly proud there have been no major accidents during the 21 years. No burns, no broken bones, no overturned canoes even though they have struck rough water on occasion. However, the girls, ranging in age from 14 to 18, are pretty well trained to have respect for water and in handling canoes before they ever go on a big trip. They are also trained in carrying their canoes overhead before they ever undertake a portage.

Although there have been no accidents, there was once a slight mishap at Swartz Bay. But this wasn't anything to do with the girls.

When the Lorna D. was in these waters, the owners took the Rangers on several trips, mostly around the Gulf Islands, to show them the ropes in a sailing vessel. Returning from one of these trips and nearing Swartz Bay, a buoy wasn't sighted soon enough with the result the Lorna D. went up on the rocks. A small tug from Canoe Cove came out for the passengers and luggage and the Lorna D.

floated off the rocks at high tide, undamaged. The only thing that was lost was a camera.

The skipper says she feels safer in a canoe on a lake than she does in a car on the highway. She told me that on one trip in the Seton-Anderson lake area they didn't know they were in cougar country but didn't see any. When someone asked if they carried guns she replied, "No one would know who shot if we did have guns."

It was in the Seton-Anderson area that the Victoria Rangers picked up the beaver pelt that now hangs in the museum. This pelt started off from Yellowknife and was transported by Guides and Scouts by boat, canoe, horseback and hikers all the way to Victoria.

There is a lot of organizing before these trips, says Lillian Warne. Each 16-foot canoe carries 70 pounds of equipment and food supplies. There are two major considerations when it comes to food — weight and wet-proofing. Meats and dehydrated foods are taken, cheese, biscuits in place of bread, quick biscuit mixes, plastic pots of jam. Everything goes into plastic bags with smoked bacon getting a double bag.

This is done for two reasons. One is to keep the food dry if any water is shipped and the other is so that no animals can smell the food, not even a mouse. All personal belongings are wrapped in plastic as well, just in case.

This year the Rangers with their skipper will be taking a trip to Shuswap Lake.

But right now March 6 is the big date. And Lillian Warne is looking forward to

No Trace, No Scent Of Wayward Rosie

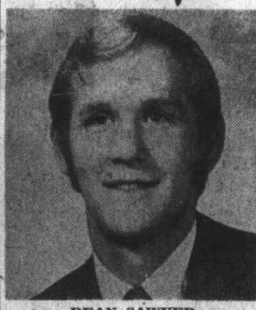

HAMILTON (CP) — Hope is fading for Rosie, a 28-inch boa constrictor which slithered out of its cage in the science classroom at Briarwood junior vocational school here two weeks ago.

About 315 girls, who had grown fond of Rosie during its three months at the school, tried to entice the snake to return when it was discovered missing by dousing themselves with rose-scented perfume.

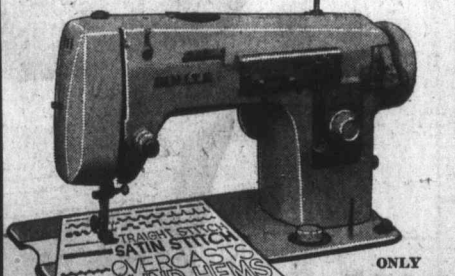

The girls searched everywhere and now fear Rosie may be lost somewhere in the school's ductwork system. A snake expert from the Royal Ontario Museum says because of low humidity this time of year, Rosie could not live much longer than a month without drying out and dying.

Nuptial Cake Bribe Enough

DES MOINES, Iowa (UPI) — For five pieces of a wedding cake, a young Des Moines woman has been granted permission to hold her wedding on the grounds of the Iowa statehouse.

But Laurie Stites, 20, who says she wants an outdoor wedding "to be different" may employ her prerogative to change her mind and foil the appetites of Iowa's five top elected officials.

On Monday, the Iowa executive council agreed to Miss Stites' request to conduct her June 26 wedding in the garden area south of the capital.

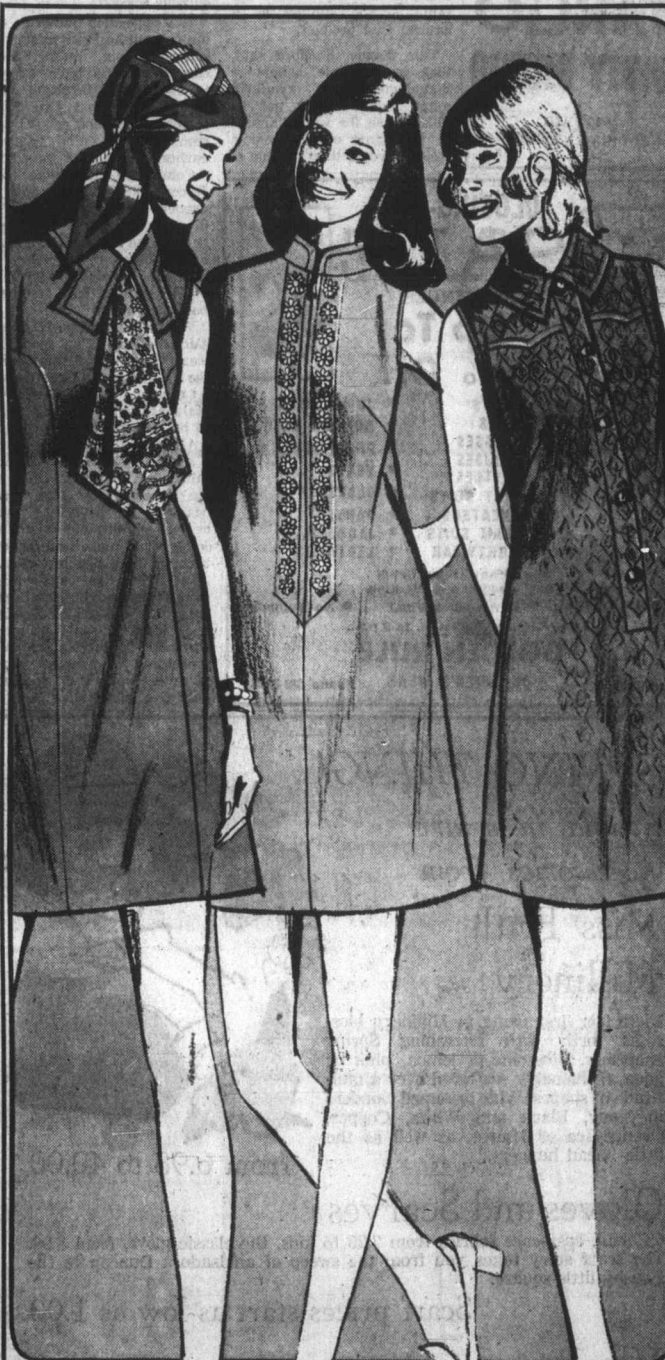

In granting the request, Secretary of State Melvin Synhorst said, "I move we approve as long as we each get a piece of the wedding cake."

But Miss Stites is holding out, instead, for a chance to hold her wedding at the scenic garden area of Greenwood Park in Des Moines.

"The statehouse is really my second choice," she said. "I'm really hoping for Greenwood."

"I really wanted to do something different, to be different," she said. "I don't really like church weddings, I guess."

A bill which could give the provincial government the power to ban all synthetic food products from sale in B.C. if it wished was introduced in the Legislature by Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford Wednesday.

But Shelford said later outside the House that it was unlikely many such products would be banned provided they were clearly marked to be synthetic and not natural foods.

The bill, entitled the Synthetic Food Products Act, includes a clause which states that: "No person shall manufacture, process, sell, offer for sale, or have in his possession for sale a synthetic food product, unless the synthetic food product is exempted from this section by the regulations."

'Apple' Out

The regulations are not specifically laid down in the act, but might designate certain products as synthetic, fix standards, definitions and descriptions of such products, and agree that products be exempted from the ban providing they met those standards, Shelford said.

Another clause in the act states that no synthetic food product should be advertised or described using words or illustrations that are the same as or similar to a natural food product.

This means, Shelford said, that, for example, sellers or manufacturers of synthetic apple drinks would not be able to use the word "apple" in the name or advertising. Neither would they be able to use a picture of an apple on the package or in advertising. Other products that may come under immediate scrutiny when the act is passed include synthetic beefsteaks and chickens, the minister said.

Under the bill anyone found guilty of offences under the act may be fined between $25 and $500.

Resistance

Purpose of the bill was to protect both consumers and manufacturers of natural food products, he said. He noted that consumers in Canada spend about $18 million annually on synthetic food products, but mainly without realizing they were synthetic, he said.

He felt there would be much "consumer resistance" to synthetic foods if the consumers knew they were synthetic, he commented.

The bill would also help producers of natural foods, he said, because consumers would know which were natural foods and which were synthetic. If consumers did not like a synthetic food product, it would not turn them against the similar natural product, he said.

School Witch Hunt Feared

Tenure Change Opposed

Three B.C. public school principals agreed Wednesday there might be a danger of a witch hunt if legislation affecting teachers' tenure was changed.

The trio appeared before the legislature's social welfare and education committee, which is studying the question of tenure for teachers. Les Isaacson, principal of George Jay elementary school, told the committee he felt the school system "should do something" about a small number of incompetent teachers. But, he added, "I don't think this can be legislated."

Isaacson said that in Victoria, the problems surrounding the tenure issue are now being discussed by principals and district administrators. The solution lies in better communication at all levels, he added.

"If there is to be a kind of a witch hunt, if teachers are to be removed from principals, and if teachers think they are going to be out of a job... then we will be going backwards," Isaacson said.

Donald Smith, principal of Arbutus junior secondary school, said he agreed legislative changes might bring about a witch hunt among teachers.

"I agree," Smith told the committee. "I think we are moving forward now in a professional manner. If we put something down (in the form of new legislation relating to tenure) then we are going to have to be awfully careful because we could destroy more than we are creating."

He suggested there should be a two-year probationary period so that new teachers will have ample opportunity to show their potential.

Grants Total
54,279

Since the beginning of government home acquisition grants in 1968, 42,306 grants of up to $300 have been made to help buyers of older homes, the Legislature learned Wednesday.

Replying to Ernie Hall (NDP-Surrey), Premier Bennett said that during the same time, 11,973 new home grants of up to $1,000 each were issued.

The government has announced that grants will no longer be available for buying older homes after March 31, a move which has been strongly objected to by opposition MLAs.

Subpoena Possible

The Legislature's agriculture committee voted Wednesday to subpoena any major food processors in B.C. who have not already agreed to testify before it during the current session.

The opposition minority on the committee even wanted to subpoena six major food companies who have agreed to appear on March 15. The lone Liberal and two NDP members present argued the companies could appear earlier if they were forced to.

Committee chairman Willis Jefcoat (S.C.—Shuswap) argued the motion was a direct challenge to the chair because he had invited the six companies and negotiated a date for their appearance. Seated committee members backed him up.

Works Minister W. N. Chant said the opposition members were "putting the cart before the horse." But Robert Strachan (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat) said: "I just want to be sure the horse is here."

Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound) called on the committee at the opening of its first hearing to subpoena witnesses, pointing out failure to do so would make its proceedings "a farce like last year."

In 1970, the agriculture committee studying the broad area of where the food dollar goes in B.C., sent out more than 90 invitations to food processing companies and farm groups and received only five submissions.

The six companies whose submission will be heard March 15 are: Canada Safeway Ltd., High-Low Foods, Kelly Douglas and Co. Ltd., H. Y. Louis Co. Ltd., W. H. Malkin Ltd., and Woodwards Stores Ltd.

The committee then approved a motion to subpoena any group which hasn't responded to the invitation to appear or send a submission.

Jefcoat protested he didn't want to force anyone to appear and argued that more than 90 invitations had gone out.

Outside the committee, Williams said: "The motion was passed today to subpoena all processors, handlers and retailers of food that have not at this time indicated to the committee they will appear."

"If those subpoenas don't go out forthwith it clearly shows this committee's operation, once again this year, is nothing but a farce."

"We can always get farmers and farm organizations, but we get nowhere with the link between the farmer and the consumer, that is the market segment."

Death His Fault

A 21-year-old serviceman brought on his death "by his own negligence" last Saturday on the Malahat Highway, Greater Victoria Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre ruled Wednesday after conducting an inquiry.

The inquiry concerned the case of Donald Howse, CFB Naden, who died in Naden Hospital at about 6:50 p.m. Saturday, more than six hours after an accident on the Bamerton Hill section of the highway.

St. Jorre said Howse, who had received his driver's licence only three weeks before, passed a car without making sure no traffic was coming in the opposite direction.

To avoid such traffic, he said, Howse cut back and went out of control, hitting a guardrail. Police said earlier that impact caused the car doors to open and Howse was thrown into a deep, rock-filled, waterless ditch outside the guardrail.

Hunters' Bird Dogs May Spread Rabies

Outdoorsmen who take their dogs on bird-hunting trips to Alberta may unwittingly precipitate a rabies problem in B.C., says Dr. A. A. Larsen, provincial epidemiologist. He told the Colonist Wednesday that the incidence of rabies among Alberta's wildlife has been increasing — there have been 10 reported cases of animal rabies in that province since last July — and there is a chance that it would naturally "spill over" into B.C.

Natural carriers would be animals that use mountain passes during migrations.

However, a more serious problem is presented by persons who take hunting-dogs into Alberta, said Larsen.

"Literally hundreds of British Columbians take their dogs into Alberta," said Larsen. "This means any dog coming back might be incubating the disease."

He explained that it might be four or five months before the dog manifests a rabies infection. In one case in England, the symptoms were not observed until one year after a dog became infected.

In the meantime, the animal is capable of spreading the infection to other creatures, including humans. Larsen said persons who have come into contact with animal rabies are given vaccine — one "shot" a day for 14 days. A person who has been torn and bitten by an animal may get a 22-day course.

Teenagers Contract Rubella

The provincial Public Health Service has had reports of outbreaks of rubella (German measles) among unvaccinated teenagers but there is no indication of a B.C.-wide epidemic.

A spokesman said Wednesday that in addition to Vancouver, which earlier this week reported that a number of older children in secondary schools were coming down with the disease, there have been similar reports from the Trail and Chilliwack districts.

Death His Fault

A 21-year-old serviceman brought on his death "by his own negligence" last Saturday on the Malahat Highway, Greater Victoria Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre ruled Wednesday after conducting an inquiry.

The inquiry concerned the case of Donald Howse, CFB Naden, who died in Naden Hospital at about 6:50 p.m. Saturday, more than six hours after an accident on the Bamberton Hill section of the highway.

St. Jorre said Howse, who had received his driver's licence only three weeks before, passed a car without making sure no traffic was coming in the opposite direction.

To avoid such traffic, he said, Howse cut back and went out of control, hitting a guardrail. Police said earlier that impact caused the car doors to open and Howse was thrown into a deep, rock-filled, waterless ditch outside the guardrail.

The Austin Mini: only $1745*

To make it any lower we'd have to let the air out of the tires.

$1745 never went so far. Because that's all it costs* to own a new Austin Mini. And although the Mini is a small car, it's all car. It's a great little performer — one that really hangs in there on the corners, parks on a dime, pulls through anything with front-wheel drive traction. The Mini gets up to 40 miles to the gallon, too. So you'll save a lot on gas. In fact, "save" is what Mini is all about; over 2,000,000 owners will testify to that! See it.

And while you're visiting your dealer kick the tires of Mini's big brother, Austin America. Another great value!

One of the world's great car-makers... serving all Canada.

*Manufacturer's suggested retail price, Halifax, Montreal, Burlington, Vancouver. Provincial sales tax, license and transportation costs, if any, are extra. All Austins are backed by five British Leyland parts depots and 150 dealers coast to coast. See the dealer nearest you.

Motorists Line Up, Right on Queue

With three days, including today, to go, tardy motorists are paying for waiting to get 1971 decals, by more waiting. Project Unfinished

River Treaty Payment All but Gone

Premier Bennett has tabled figures in the legislature which show only $10.6 million remains unspent of the $273.3 million obtained from the United States under the Columbia River Treaty as payment for downstream benefits.

The premier made the figures available one day after the legislature approved his salary estimates. During that debate, held Monday and Tuesday, all of Bennett's actions were under scrutiny and opposition members complained they had been denied access to figures usually available on Columbia Treaty funds.

In his answer to written questions placed on the order paper by Opposition Leader David Barrett, Bennett said to Dec. 31, 1970, a total of $377.8 million had been expended on the Columbia project from American funds.

The $273.3 million of the original lump sum payment has earned a total of $94.9 million in flood control benefits, following completion of two of the three treaty dams in Canada, and interest payments.

Expenditures listed by Bennett, who acts as fiscal agent for B.C. Hydro and Power Authority, are $31.8 million on Duncan dam, $139.5 million on the High Arrow Dam and $203.8 million to date on the construction of Mica Dam. General development costs are $2.7 million and there is $10.6 million left in the Columbia Treaty account.

Bennett came under repeated attack during his estimates for claims that U.S. funds would pay for all Columbia River costs including addition of generating facilities at Mica.

However, with approximately half of the Mica project still uncompleted, there is only $10.6 million left unspent, indicating that approximately $200 million or more would be required from other sources to complete the Columbia project.

There was an apparent contradiction in an answer given by Bennett to another Barrett question on the order paper. In it, the premier said the total amount of funds expended on the Columbia to Dec. 31, 1970, was $432.1 million adding that all of the moneys were obtained from the U.S. under the Columbia Treaty. He added that no up-to-date cost estimates on the finished project were available.

In reply to another question by the NDP leader, Bennett said a total of $609 million has been spent to date on the Peace River project.

Bennett Moves Bonds

Figures released in the Legislature Wednesday showed Premier Bennett has been able to sell $84 million worth of parity bonds that he was forced to buy during the high-interest rate period of 1969-70.

The report indicated that in February, 1970, the government held $115 worth of parity bonds, but on Dec. 31, it held only $81 million.

The money is held in a variety of pension, perpetual, and other special funds. Bennett has said some of the money will be put into long-term bonds for school and hospital construction.

Harpist's Program Below Par

By BILL THOMAS

We are told on reliable authority that harp music is what the faithful get to hear in heaven. After Wednesday's recital by Nicaron Zabaleta in the McPherson Playhouse, I'm prepared to proceed upon the advice of my less charitable friends.

The fault may be set in two areas — the programming and the weakness of the soloist. Most of the music had been transcribed from piano works and was uniformly dull. Never was there a moment when a mood of vitality or vivacity came across.

Technically Zabaleta allowed some buzz notes that aren't normally expected of an artist of this calibre. His technique was off and in no way compared to his earlier work in Victoria.

Possibly the most attractive thing that happened was the Bach Suite based on a violin partita, but it stood alone. Possibly a rest and period of relaxation will allow Zabaleta to regain those qualities which endeared him to Victoria audiences. He will be heard Sunday and Monday with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

The Teamsters' strike-lockout spread to the University of Victoria Wednesday bringing a brief halt to construction work on a $1 million addition to the Clearhouse building.

Some 35 tradesmen stayed off the job when a Teamster picket line appeared at 8:30 a.m. The Teamsters said a machine from Johnston Terminals — involved in the lockout — had been moved onto the grounds.

A spokesman for the construction union said the contracting firm, W. Campbell Ltd., applied for a court injunction restraining picketing and was "granted one in record time" by the B.C. Supreme Court in Victoria.

The pickets were removed, as a result, by 11 a.m. The Teamsters' union intends to challenge the injunction before the same court, possibly by next Monday.

Gas Profit Reduced

B.C. Hydro profits from its sale of natural gas decreased by $3.5 million from 1968-69 to 1969-70, it was learned in the Legislature Wednesday.

In answers to written questions, Premier Bennett disclosed that profits from gas sales were $4.8 million in 1968-69. In 1969-70, the figure was $1.3 million.

The government paid $30.5 million for natural gas for resale in 1969-70, compared to $22.0 million in 1968-69.

Pollution Bane Of Workers

Pollution problems normally overlooked are those within plants that affect workers, Murray Drew, president of the Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America, said Wednesday.

Drew told 13 persons attending a Victoria Labor Council panel on pollution that workers sometimes had to work in dust-filled areas.

"There are government agencies that should be checking this sort of thing," Drew said, "but for some reason they seem to close their eyes to it."

"We should be controlling plants and the conditions people work under. You can pass all the legislation you want, but if you don't control it and police it, it's worth as much as the paper it's written on."

Other panelists were Rory Finegan, wildlife biologist with the provincial fish and wildlife branch, Victoria Aid, Clyde Savage, and John White, president of the Victoria branch of the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control.

Patients Get Help

A volunteer group being organized to work in Greater Victoria nursing homes and extended-care hospitals will help patients some of whom otherwise "might as well be dead," Oak Bay MLA Dr. Scott Wallace said Wednesday.

The volunteer program, run by the Women's Ecumenical Outreach Movement, was termed a "tremendous idea" by Wallace who addressed a day-long workshop for prospective volunteers Wednesday.

Social Mix Reflected In Housing

The Batten-Fielding housing project of the Cosmopolitan Club and Victoria and Vancouver Island Multiple Sclerosis Society will provide a living example of an integrated segment of society, Victoria architect John Di Castri told the 21st annual meeting of the society Tuesday night.

"This project will not be an isolated example of accommodation for handicapped, elderly citizens or low income people," the architect said. "It will be a living organism illustrating the intermix which exists in our society."

The project is designed to provide integrated housing for handicapped people, elderly citizens and general housing, he said.

Di Castri showed slides of the proposed development which is to be built in Saanich between Darwin and Vernon Avenues. Plans showed an apartment block, townhouses, an activity centre, Canadian Mental Health centre and a hostel for handicapped. Work on the property has already begun.

In his annual report, president George Smith paid tribute to the work of all committees, particularly the Patient Aid Committee and the clinic in the Saanich Municipal Hall complex under the supervision of Mrs. Pat Spriggs, physiotherapist.

The president said projects under consideration include a day-care centre in Victoria for the handicapped and a program to help patients from Campbell River to Sidney.

A report of the work of the Golden Key auxiliary was given by the president, Mrs. Alberta Hodgson, who handed the president's cheque totaling $3,000 to go toward patient aid. The money had been raised through teas, rummage sales and bazaars.

The auxiliary also has a visiting committee whose members visit patients in hospitals, nursing homes and private homes.

Smith was elected president for a second year at the meeting which was held in the War Amputations Hall.

On St. Joseph's Agreement

Sisters Agreeable

Sisters of St. Ann, owners of St. Joseph's Hospital, have indicated that Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society might be the new owner of the hospital after all.

In a letter, discussed at Wednesday's meeting of the Capital Region's hospital board, the Sisters' lawyers point out that Health Minister Ralph Lofmark last summer said Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society was brought into being to acquire and administer the hospital.

"In this, the Sisters of St. Ann concur and they still favor the gift of St. Joseph's Hospital to the society which was specifically formed for the purpose of acquiring and administering the hospital," says the letter.

"We are aware that once the gift has been made the society would then be free to make whatever arrangements it saw fit with regard to the eventual ownership and disposition of the hospital."

Most of the letter deals with current discussions between regional board and Sisters of St. Ann over acquisition of a portion of the grounds of St. Ann's Academy for future development of St. Joseph's.

The letter discussed Wednesday contracts with one written by the sisters' lawyers last November to the hospital society that said they "have not, nor do they intend at this time" to give the hospital to Vancouver Island Hospital Society.

The November letter also told the society's lawyers:

"The Sisters of St. Ann find your instructions most difficult to understand as they are aware of no basis for same. (The 'instructions' were to lawyers to convey the hospital to the society.)

"We can only suggest that your instructions are the result of some misunderstanding on the part of the representatives of your client society," the letter said.

UVic Assembly Delays Meeting

A meeting of University of Victoria's Representative Assembly, scheduled for Feb. 28, has been postponed one day. Incoming Alma Mater Society president Ian McKinnon told the Colonist Wednesday.

McKinnon said the meeting was delayed so that the assembly's new executive, which takes office March 1, can deal with a resolution from the Student Action Committee asking for a contract extension for 12 UVic faculty members whose contracts are not being renewed. The resolution asks for a one-year reprieve.

The action committee was formed to act independently after the assembly rejected the resolution Feb. 14. Only five of the 18 executive members were present at that meeting.

McKinnon said he was "concerned over the direction the action committee is taking."

"If they're going to be independent of us (the RA), then we'll cut off their funds. It's as simple as that."

The assembly allotted funds to the then-steering committee at the Feb. 14 meeting. The action committee has made no move to officially sever itself from the assembly.

case of 29-year-old Art Barratt of Nanaimo, B.C. Married with four children, he found it difficult to support a family from his earnings at part-time and seasonal work. He went to his Canada Manpower Centre and, because of his interest and talent in drawing, was put on a training course at the Kootenay School of Art. At the end of the course he found employment as

Beatles' Assets 'Not in Jeopardy'

LONDON (UPI) — Allen Klein Wednesday rejected charges by Beatle Paul McCartney that the singing group suffered because of Klein's management. An accountant backed him up saying Klein made the Beatles multimillionaires.

Klein, an American and manager of the rock group since May, 1963, said in an affidavit before British court that the Beatles benefited greatly from his management.

He said he rejected allegations by McCartney about his commercial integrity and his dealings with the group. "On the contrary, they have greatly benefited," he said, adding that assets of the Beatles partnership "are not in any sense" now in jeopardy.

In another affidavit, accountant John Darby said Klein's stewardship of Beatle affairs was "very successful" and Beatle income had increased five fold since he took over as manager.

Darby said Beatle income in 1970 alone totaled $10.5 million.

Lawyer Morris Finer introduced Darby's affidavit in the high court hearing of an action by McCartney to break up the Beatles' partnership and name a receiver to handle assets.

John Lennon, George Harrison and Ringo Starr, who oppose McCartney's legal battle, testified Tuesday that McCartney had been the Beatles' odd man out since their earliest days.

Ringo Starr testified Tuesday that McCartney behaved "like a spoiled child." Harrison said he had to put up with McCartney telling Harrison how to play his own instrument.

OTTAWA (CP) — Among Liberals, there is talk — not a lot yet, but some — about the possibility of a federal general election in the fall.

This talk has spread to the Conservatives. In fact, more Conservatives than Liberals seem to be saying there is a chance of an election in September or October.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield has warned his supporters to be ready for an election at any time.

Sources close to Prime Minister Trudeau are inclined to discount any election this year but a prominent Liberal said Tuesday in an interview: "Don't discount the possibility. It's something to be looked at seriously in a few months."

Liberals who advance the theory of a fall election predict that all or most of the economic indicators will show by summer a business upturn with a reduced unemployment rate and relatively small growth in inflation. They maintain Trudeau

Grits May Call Vote in Fall

By DAVE MCINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Among Liberals, there is talk — not a lot yet, but some — about the possibility of a federal general election in the fall.

This talk has spread to the Conservatives. In fact, more Conservatives than Liberals seem to be saying there is a chance of an election in September or October.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield has warned his supporters to be ready for an election at any time.

Sources close to Prime Minister Trudeau are inclined to discount any election this year but a prominent Liberal said Tuesday in an interview: "Don't discount the possibility. It's something to be looked at seriously in a few months."

Liberals who advance the theory of a fall election predict that all or most of the economic indicators will show by summer a business upturn with a reduced unemployment rate and relatively small growth in inflation.

They maintain Trudeau would be better advised to call an election this fall than wait for the spring or early summer of 1972 after another winter of possibly high unemployment.

The decision is Trudeau's alone, though a lot of people and events can have an influence on it.

Trudeau called a general election in June, 1968, after he was elected Liberal leader and won a Commons majority, the first since former Conservative prime minister John Diefenbaker's landslide victory in 1958.

Trudeau does not have to hold another election until June, 1973, but nobody expects him to wait the full five years, by which time he would have lost the big advantage of timing.

Liberals who favor, at the moment, a fall election say Trudeau will have to wait until the summer before making a decision.

Two major factors would then be taken into account: The economic indicators and the success, or otherwise, of the next constitutional conference in Victoria in June.

You've changed.

We've changed.

We've made mid-size Chevelle fit your mood even better.

Chevelle has always been one of Canada's most popular mid-size cars. So there's no way we'd make any drastic changes in the 1971 Chevelle. What we did was make a few improvements.

STARTING AT THE BEGINNING. We re-styled the grille and the front bumper. There are big, new, brighter, single Power-Beam headlights. And new front fender lights do triple-duty by serving as parking, turn-signal and side marker lights.

INSIDE. The steering wheel has a cushioned centre and there are softer and safer instrument panel knobs. Interiors are restyled for '71 with new patterns. New trim, too.

MECHANICALLY SPEAKING. Two big anti-pollution improvements. An Evaporation Control System minimizes evaporation of fuel into the atmosphere. And Chevelle's engines are designed to operate efficiently, and with lower exhaust emissions, on low-lead, no-lead, or regular fuels. You've changed. You're more concerned about clean air. So are we.

THE OUTSIDE STORY. Very bright, with a choice of 15 Magic-Mirror acrylic lacquer colors—13 all new for 1971. And to wrap it all up, a resculptured rear bumper (looks good, doesn't it?) with built-in taillights.

That's the 1971 Chevelle. The mid-size car that gives you big-size value. Just what you're in the mood for.

Make the change to Chevelle! At your Chevrolet dealer's, today.

Manson Women Lying—Witness

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Charles Manson's lawyer tried one last time Wednesday to break the story of Linda Kasabian, but the key state witness at the Tate murder trial never faltered and instead left him sputtering with frustration.

Irving Kanarek had the 23-year-old petite blonde brought back again from New Hampshire to challenge her testimony six months ago that Charles Manson ordered his cult followers to carry out the slayings.

Pale but composed, Mrs. Kasabian stuck to her account and said, in effect, the three women defendants were lying in the "confessions" they have made during the past two weeks on the witness stand in an apparent attempt to save Manson from the gas chamber.

Mrs. Kasabian was shielded by deputies and deputy district attorneys in the courtroom as Susan Atkins, Patricia Krenwinkel and Leslie van Houten filed past her.

The three other women had testified Manson knew nothing about perpetrating the Tate-Labianca murders.

Proud Barque Now in Ruins

In May, 1969, the Canadian-built sailing barque Monte Cristo was a thing of beauty as she lay alongside the dock at Oak Bay Marina.

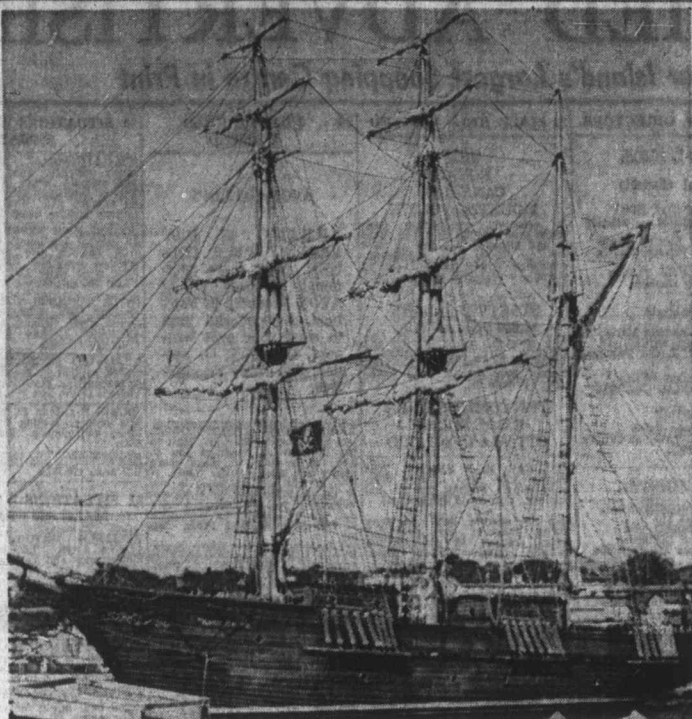

Today the barque, which meanwhile was renamed Endeavour II, is a wreck, pounded into "a million pieces" on a New Zealand sandbar, according to owner Ronald Craig.

The vessel is not salvageable, Craig said, after inspecting the wreckage on remote Parengarenga Harbor on the eastern tip of New Zealand's North Island.

She was driven ashore Monday by high winds and seas and lies on her side in three feet of water. The crew of 14 scrambled to safety aboard a life raft.

Craig is reported to have spent $1 million on the barque which was built in Vancouver in 1968 for world cruising.

Plagued by financial woes since her launching, the 150-ton vessel was named for the Capt. Cook bicentenary celebration in Australia, after the flag-ship he sailed 200 years ago when he discovered Australia and New Zealand.

New Biology Quarters

Part of UVic Moving

The University of Victoria biology department has started to move into its new quarters in the recently-completed biological sciences building.

The $2.4 million building is located in the woods to the southwest of the department's present home on the second floor of the Elliott building. J. T. Kyle, UVic administrative vice-president, told the Colonist the three-storey building would provide about 71,600 square feet of space, or approximately double the space currently available to the department.

Half of the area will be used for research facilities; about 32 per cent for undergraduate laboratory facilities; about 10 per cent for general purposes, and the remainder for general study space such as seminar rooms.

"It's a very functional building," Kyle said. "All of the most modern research facilities have been included but it is not extraordinary."

He said the $2.4 million cost included installed equipment and that an additional $100,000 of new movable equipment was being provided. Other equipment will be that already owned by the department.

This first phase of the move is expected to be finished by the end of this week, when no classes are scheduled. Transfer should be completed by the end of the term.

Kyle said three general-purpose classrooms in the building are currently being used by departments other than biology. He also said a final decision had not been made as to what use the facilities being vacated would be put to, although the building would remain completely a science building.

Construction of the biological sciences building began in May, 1969, and was officially completed Dec. 31, 1970. Architects were Erickson and Massey.

Underground Wire Long-Range Plan

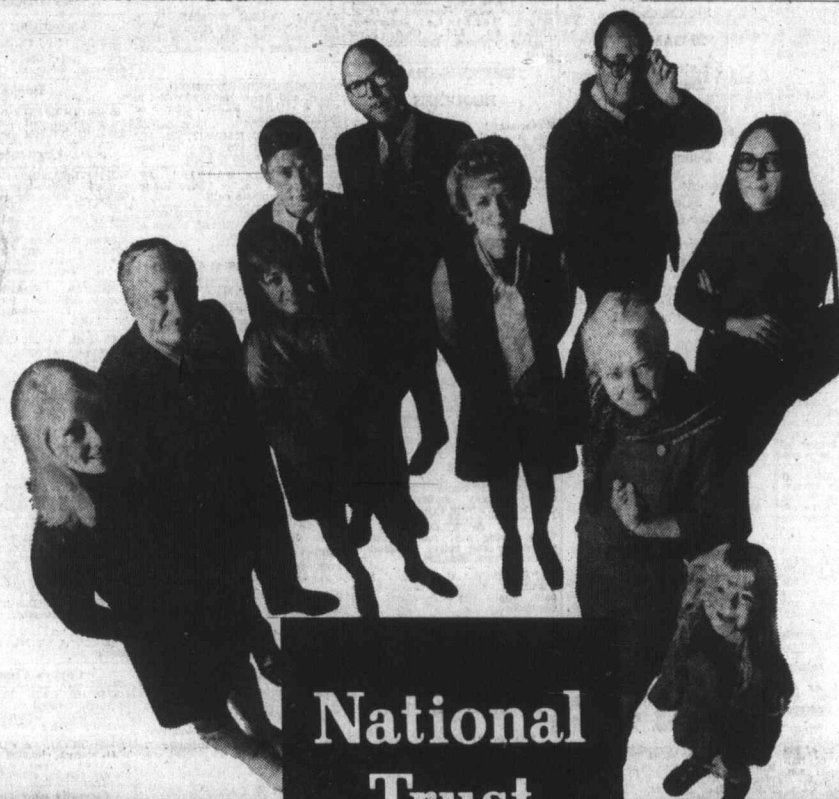

B.C. Telephone Company's plan to place some of its wires underground in phases is not going to be the early improvement that had been anticipated, Oak Bay council learned this week.

Work is expected to begin shortly on placing telephone wires underground on Hampshire Road south of Oak Bay Avenue, but Oak Bay municipal engineer, Geoff White, told council this week the benefit would not be apparent for some time.

"They put wires underground, but they leave the other wires up until the end of their economic life, so it is not the advantage we expected," he said.

"We get the damage to the road now and then the wires go several years later."

Crushers Against Smoke Eaters

By BRUCE LOWTHER

Don't ever let anyone tell you there's no social life in the Colwood-Langford area. In fact, what Langford firemen and Colwood RCMP call the No. 1 social event of the year is coming up next Sunday, and they'd like everyone in Greater Victoria to attend.

It's not exactly a pink tea. It's not even a fancy-dress ball. To be honest about it, the whole thing isn't very social—but it should be fun, and the burns unit at St. Joseph's Hospital will benefit.

At 6 p.m. next Sunday in the Esquimalt Sports Centre, the Colwood RCMP Crushers and Langford fire department Smoke Eaters will begin their fourth—or maybe fifth—annual benefit hockey game for the burns unit.

Social Season's Premiere Event

The opposing sides were responsible Wednesday for the claim that this game is the year's premiere social event for their area. But then, they said the No. 2 event is their annual summer softball meeting and No. 3 was a cribbage tournament.

More than $265 has been raised, in the three reported hockey games to date, by collections from spectators in the 1,200-seat sports centre.

Rumors of a fourth game were unconfirmed Wednesday, and the informants may have got it mixed up with a recent monopoly tournament remembered mainly because the hockey trophy vanished.

Rival coaches Alan LeQuesne, the Langford chief, and Colwood Cpl. Bob DeArmand are believed to be working on such amusing refinements as suddenly-reappearing trophies, a plethora of pucks on the ice, pushups as penalties, charges of imported players and such.

The ice will be donated by the Esquimalt minor hockey association, which also provides referees, while the navy will donate hockey equipment.

The police and firemen will donate their time and energies, and all they ask from the public is a donation of some money for a good cause—in return for a questionable improvement in social standing but a definite modicum of fun.

Sidney Unveils New Scout Hall

A new scout hall has been opened on Third Street, Sidney.

It is the former Anglican church hall which was moved to its present location a year ago.

It has undergone extensive alterations, with most of the work being done by parents and friends of Scouting.

The hall was officially opened Sunday afternoon by Freeman King, who told the gathering of the first Scout meeting held in Sidney in 1913 in an old shack.

Four special awards were made during the afternoon by district commissioner Jack Anderson. Jonathan Moffatt and Danny Tomsett received the Silver Challenge award. Fred Bowcott was given the Bronze Challenge Award and Don Griffiths the Pioneer Challenge award.

IT'S BIGGER! MAYBE ONE OF THE KIDS, DIGGING A FORT.
"YOU'RE DOING A BIG BUSINESS," THE STRANGER SAID.
"YUP," THE BARTENDER REPLIED. "WE'VE BEEN EXPANDING AT A FURIOUS RATE."
"What's the crowd doing over there?"
"They're playing poker. The game's been going on for eight years now, without a stop. It started as a little domino game but pretty soon it escalated into poker."
The stranger wandered over to the table. There were six men sitting around the table — Black Jack Hanoy, Tiger Cy Gone, Charlie Cong, Big Sam, Little Louse and Kid Kamboadia.
"Who's winning?" the stranger asked a man named Frenchie.
"Beta me," he said. "I quit playing with these guys 16 years ago."
Big Sam had a giant stack of chips in front of him, and he kept giving chips to Tiger Cy Gone after each hand.
Frenchie whispered, "Big Sam says he wants out of the game, but he won't quit until Black Jack Hanoy admits defeat. Black Jack just sits there with a poker face and every time his stack gets low the Chinese guy and the fat guy they call 'The Bear' give him more chips to play with."
"What are the guns doing on the table?" the stranger asked.
"Each player says the other guy is cheating. We've had some big shoot-outs up around here. I've seen some mean poker games, but this beats all."
"How did it all start?" the stranger asked.
"Wal, way back before anyone can remember, Charlie Cong and Tiger Cy Gone started a penny ante poker game amongst themselves."
"Pretty soon Tiger Cy Gone, who was one of the worst poker players around, began losing, and so Big Sam, who was considered one of the great card players of all time, started to give the Tiger advice."
"Big Sam also staked Cy Gone to a small stack of chips, which the Tiger lost immediately. So Big Sam gave him a larger stack and Tiger Cy Gone, who couldn't get the hang of the game, lost that stack."
"Finally Big Sam got so exasperated that he decided to get into the game himself. He put a large stack of chips in front of him hoping to scare Charlie Cong out."
"But instead, Charlie called on his friend, Black Jack Hanoy, who was anxious to get in the game because he had a grudge against Tiger."
"Before anyone knew it, the game escalated from penny ante poker to table stakes with one winner."
Frenchie whispered to the stranger, "He keeps saying that every time he gets the deal."

M.V. Chesnut Wild Tamed

One of my well-remembered taste treats of boyhood days is the flavor of the little wild strawberries we gathered in the hedgerows and wooded glades back in Ontario many years ago. These berries were hard to find, and I don't think we were ever successful in gathering enough of them for a sitdown feed. In any case, they didn't seem to call for the sugar-and-cream treatment but were at their delicious best when picked and eaten as found.

I never expected to come across the refreshing tart-sweet flavor of these little wild berries in adult life, but we have come very close to it in an everbearing alpine strawberry from West Germany called Baron Solemacher. I saw the seeds of these berries listed in a catalogue some years ago and sent for a packet, more through curiosity than anything else, but they turned out to be a real conversation piece in our garden.

Most strawberries are difficult to raise from seeds but Baron Solemacher comes up as readily as a radish. I started mine in squatty flower pots indoors, sowing the seeds very thinly indeed, and transplanting them in their outdoor positions when the plants were about two inches tall.

As far as I can tell, the Baron Solemacher strawberry isn't the least bit fussy as to its growing site. I have some plants growing in shade, in moist soil heavily enriched with rotted leaves, duplicating as nearly as possible the woodland conditions under which the wild strawberries of my boyhood days were found, but I have others which seem to be doing quite well in ordinary backyard soil and in full sun.

Moisture is a must, of course, for the berries are flavorless under droughty conditions. As for soil texture and aspect, though, Baron Solemacher couldn't care less.

The plants are small, neat and compact, making no runners at all, and are quite ornamental, bejewelled with their ruby berries. For this reason, we are using some of our plants as an ornamental edging around one of our flower beds, and these never fail to evoke comments from visitors.

The berries are pointed, cone-shaped and quite small, but are produced continuously all summer long and well into the fall. Propagation is by dividing the clump when the plant has made more than one crown, in much the same manner as the breaking-up of an overgrown African violet.

The garden books say that runnerless strawberry plants tend to go downhill under this treatment, and they advise raising new plants from seed every year, but I haven't noticed any signs of deterioration in our divided plants as yet.

This alpine strawberry seems to be singularly free from the various moulds and mildews and other infections that plague our bigger cultivated varieties. I believe this is because our native aphids, which spread much of our disease, don't go for this European wild plant. The birds, unfortunately, have no such inhibitions, and it is a constant battle of wits to keep them from taking all the berries.

I don't think Baron Solemacher will ever be a commercial success, for apart from the small size of the berries, there are never enough of them ready for picking at one time to make a worthwhile feed. For a novelty, though, and to recapture that nostalgic "wild" flavor, the Baron's strawberry is out of this world.

Art Buchwald Poker Game Unending

The bullet-seared Indochina Bar and Grill was jammed when the dusty stranger walked up and ordered a straight whiskey.

"You doing a big business," the stranger said.

"Yup," the bartender replied. "We've been expanding at a furious rate."

"What's the crowd doing over there?"

"They're playing poker. The game's been going on for eight years now, without a stop. It started as a little domino game but pretty soon it escalated into poker."

Big Sam had a giant stack of chips in front of him, and he kept giving chips to Tiger Cy Gone after each hand.

Frenchie whispered, "Big Sam says he wants out of the game, but he won't quit until Black Jack Hanoy admits defeat. Black Jack just sits there with a poker face and every time his stack gets low the Chinese guy and the fat guy they call 'The Bear' give him more chips to play with."

"But instead, Charlie called on his friend, Black Jack Hanoy, who was anxious to get in the game because he had a grudge against Tiger."

"Before anyone knew it, the game escalated from penny ante poker to table stakes with one winner."

Frenchie whispered to the stranger, "He keeps saying that every time he gets the deal."

Marilyn Beck Holiday with Play

It's going to be all play and no work for Elizabeth Montgomery during her Bewitched hiatus. Most series stars scurry to line up film commitments during their TV show layoffs. Not Liz. "Why ruin a vacation with work?" asked the lovely who has the security of knowing her series is sold for two more years. And so it's off to the East for Liz and her producer-husband Bill Asher, "To see some plays on Broadway, to do a little shopping." And, most particularly, to spend a few weeks at the family farm near Pauling, N.Y.

The Ashers will spend the balance of their 10-week vacation at home in Hollywood with their three young tots. They're both devoted tennis players, and last year had their swimming pool moved so there would be space on the property for a tennis court. "Now we have everything right at home," says Liz. "Who needs to go to a resort? Certainly it was expensive, but if you can afford it, what's money for if not to enjoy?" Afford it they certainly can. Bewitched has been magic for the Ashers. They're in the millionaire bracket now, owning 20 per cent of the show. And enjoy her life Liz Montgomery certainly does!

Joan Blondell is writing a novel. She doesn't know if it'll sell, but she isn't particularly concerned about that. Writing helps to pass the idle hours, explained the one-time film queen.

Over at Paramount, Mike Connors wonders how much longer he wants to continue as a TV lead. His Mannix contract has another season to run, but there's talk that Mike might not sign on for another hitch, that he'd like to pursue his dream as a big-screen actor.

It takes courage, or naivety, to chuck the security of a steady series pay-check with motion picture production so slim. I'm still shocked at Barbara Anderson's decision to leave Ironside. I wonder if Barbara's given much thought to others who have made that move, convinced there was big-screen fame and fortune just waiting for them. Take Barbara Bala. Her professional accomplishments have been practically nil since she left the Mission: Impossible gang.

Things are rough all over. I stopped by the City by Night set on a particularly smoggy day. Most of the cast was complaining about conditions, but not Pedro Armendariz. Pedro, a Mexican actor, told me we ain't seen nothin' yet. He said the smog is so heavy in Mexico City he recently moved his family to Cuernavaca to breathe free and easy.

New York stage actor Pat Hingle came to town to film a Medical Centre segment, and was acting like a mighty sad man. He's blue about the closing of his Broadway Child's Play in January, after a run of only 11 months. "We got five Tony Awards for the show," he pointed out. And added, "A show like that should run a minimum, say, of maybe two years." He complained that Broadway is dying, and feels part of the problem could be the street itself, that tourists get the feeling it's dangerous. "The whole atmosphere, it frightens them, he says. 'They go away, glad to leave.'

Truck Firms Lift Lockout, Teamsters Await B.C. Order

House Backs Work Motion

By DON COLLINS and IAN STREET

The question of what happens next—a return to work in the trucking industry, a head-on collision between government and labor, or even a provincial election—hangs over B.C. in the wake of a historic 4½-hour debate in the Legislature Wednesday.

Premier Bennett has made it clear he is willing to stand or fall on the results government action might bring.

His pronouncement was made before the B.C. Legislature passed a resolution designed to end a strike-lockout that began only last Friday in the trucking and warehouse industry.

No Word on Order

The necessary back-to-work order would have to be drawn up by cabinet, but Bennett wasn't prepared to say outside the House when such a move would be made.

Just the same, one side in the dispute—the Automotive Transport Labor Relations Association—was ready to move immediately.

Said Carl Anshelm, ATLRA director: "We will comply with the wishes of the Legislature—I am now sending a telegram to the teamsters ending the lockout."

The union, however, wasn't ready to say what way it would move.

Senator Ed Lawson, Canadian director of the teamsters, said that no decision would be made by the union on whether or not to obey a government order until the union is served with such an order.

Even then, the union's West Coast officers would have to study the order closely.

SMALL SIGN-BEARER joined unidentified teamsters demonstrating outside Legislature Wednesday just before debate began on back-to-work resolution. Fraser Leversedge, 3, of 4035 Magdalen, Saanich, was passing by with his mother when teamster put sign in his hand.—(Ellis Shipman)

Year's Bus Loss Hits $775,000

B.C. Hydro buses in Greater Victoria operated at a loss of $775,000 in the fiscal year 1969-70, it was learned Wednesday in the Legislature.

In answers to written questions, Premier Bennett disclosed that total loss for the Hydro urban transit system that year was $4.7 million, of which Hydro paid $2.7 million, the other $2 million being paid by the provincial government.

The $775,000 represented 17 per cent of the total loss, with the other 83 per cent being incurred by the Greater Vancouver transit system.

But revenue—covered a smaller portion of expenses in Victoria than in Vancouver. In Victoria, the revenue was 68 per cent of the expenses, while in Vancouver it covered 79 per cent of the costs.

Total operating expenses in Victoria for 1969-70 were $2.5 million while revenue was $1.7 million. Similar figures for Vancouver were: revenue, $13.5 million; expenses, $17.4 million.

Last week the provincial government made an offer to the Vancouver and Victoria regions to join in managing the transit system, provided

U.S. 'Will Give In' To N-Blackmail

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI) — Gen. Curtis Lemay predicted Tuesday that within 18 months the United States would be forced to give in to a Soviet ultimatum to "capitulate or else."

The retired air force chief of staff, who was George Wallace's vice-presidential running mate in 1968, said he anticipated that Russia would serve ultimatums, including "complete withdrawal of American forces in Vietnam," and that President Nixon would have no choice but to surrender or succumb to the demands.

Asked to define what he meant by "or else," he replied, "nuclear weapons." He said "Russia is spending money on what is today the finest strategic weapons system in the world."

OTTAWA (UPI) — Members of a Commonwealth committee set up last month to look into British arms sales to South Africa will be canvassed to determine if a meeting of the committee is "still worthwhile," it was disclosed here Wednesday.

Commonwealth Secretary-General Arnold Smith and Canadian External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp agreed here Wednesday to go ahead with efforts to convene the meeting of the committee.

A Canadian spokesman said after the one-hour closed meeting that Smith would be getting in touch with the other members of the committee to see if they agreed with Canada that a meeting was "still worthwhile."

For Oceans

The eight-nation committee was established by the recent Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in Singapore to examine British claims that arms sales to South Africa were necessary for the security of the South Atlantic and Indian oceans.

However, the British government announced Monday it would sell Wasp military helicopters to the apartheid South African government without waiting for the committee's findings and without further Commonwealth consultations.

Still Useful

After the announcement, the Nigerian government announced it was quitting the committee and India was reported considering a similar move. The other members of the committee are Australia, Britain, Canada, Jamaica, Kenya and Malaysia.

The spokesman said Wednesday Sharp and Smith

Little Boy Kidnapped By German Leftists

BONN (AP) — A band of leftist terrorists has kidnapped a seven-year-old boy and is holding him hostage for the release of leftist West German lawyer Horst Mahler, a Munich lawyer disclosed Wednesday.

The kidnapers are also demanding a ransom of 200,000 marks ($54,000) from the West German public for the release of the boy, the lawyer said.

The boy, Michael Luhmer from the village of Niederbachem, near Bonn, has been missing since Monday.

Mahler is being held in West Berlin on suspicion of aiding the escape last May of Andreas Baader, 27, who had been serving a three-year term for arson at a Frankfurt department store.

The Munich lawyer, Rolf Bossi, said his office received a call Wednesday demanding the ransom money.

Allowance May Hinge On Number of Children

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister John Munro said Wednesday he thinks his department's white paper proposal to change the family allowance system will have to be altered to take a family's number of children into account as well as its income.

But in general terms, he said, he still considers the cutoff point of $10,000 income beyond which the social security white paper proposes that family allowances not be paid, is reasonable.

"We are trying to come up with some type of tapering formula that would eliminate the situation of a family with one child and $9,800 income receiving some benefits, and a family with 10 children and $10,100 income receiving none," he said in an interview.

"The only thing I can tell you is that we will have to bring in some formula. I think that is based on the number of children."

In an immediate sequel to the Bank of Canada's cut-the-rate policy, the government of Canada announced closure on its current issue of Canada savings bonds as from March 5.

Normally the CSB issues run until late August or early September when they are withdrawn to make way for the following year's issue introduced in November. They have not hitherto been withdrawn as early as this.

• Benson, Hees clash on bank rate. Page 13.

The reason for withdrawal is that, compared with other call money investments, they are paying far too high a rate of return to the holder.

Issued for a period of 11 years, the 1970-71 savings bonds have an average yield of 7½ per cent, and if they are held to maturing allowing the interest to accumulate each $100 invested will become $227.50 by 1981.

This year they pay 6½ per cent; for the next three years they pay 7½ per cent, and for the last seven years they pay 8 per cent.

Because the yield of 7½ per cent is at least one point higher than is available on any other Canadian government bond, the CSB during the past two months have become highly popular with investors.

Sales have skyrocketed after a slow start last November, and it has been suspected for some time that the government would have to stop sales in them if it was really determined to fight a battle against high money costs.

U.S. Agents Nab 52 In Narcotics Raid

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. federal agents using wiretaps and undercover infiltrators arrested 54 persons in New York, Chicago, Hartford and New Orleans early Wednesday in a co-ordinated assault on wholesalers in heroin.

Attorney General John Mitchell, who announced the raids at a justice department news conference, said they were part of "the largest federal crackdown ever on narcotics distribution by organized crime," a five-month operation that's still under way.

So far, he said, the raids have netted 71 pounds of heroin, 49 pounds of cocaine and 250 pounds of marijuana with a street sale value of $12.8 million. In addition, he said, $431,341 in cash, 78 guns and 35 automobiles have been seized.

Mitchell termed the operation "an unqualified success" which would have been impossible without the use of 12 court-approved wiretaps authorized by the crime control act of 1968.

Mitchell said the raids have netted 143 defendants since Operation Flanker began.

Ratepayers Join Oil Protest

PARKSVILLE — The Parksville Ratepayers' Association has agreed to join other groups in protesting the proposed movement of oil tankers along the B.C. coast.

A meeting of the ratepayers this week approved a motion giving support to the village council.

Letters of protest will be sent to both federal and provincial members of parliament.

The meeting also discussed the rapid increase in the regional district assessment. It was decided to ask the village council to request a statement from the regional district outlining the benefits derived by this area compared to larger centres.

In debate about beach cleanups before summer and beach access, a motion was approved to request the municipal council to determine if it is possible to get assistance from the provincial government in beach cleanup projects. It was said that the beaches are used by visitors from many areas and are a vital tourist attraction.

It was also decided to investigate the matter of beach access points being properly marked.

Dr. Emil Schafer was re-elected as president of the association for the second successive term. Other officers for 1971 are vice-president Herbert Welch; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Judi Pletz; and directors, Bert Auld, Mrs. Gretta Haworth, E. C. Irving and Charles Bate.

Mrs. Emil Schafer was appointed as representative to Parksville pageant committee. The next regular meeting will be held March 18.

Film Captures Mill's Solution

PORT ALBERNI — A unique situation at the MacMillan Bloedel pulp mill in which a pollution committee made up of union members consults with management on ecological problems, prompted a film crew to visit the mill this week.

The documentary they shot in color will be seen in the fall.

Arranged by the Canadian Labor Congress and the Port Alberni Labor Council, the film is part of the CLC's "citizenship program" under way across the country.

The documentary was made with the co-operation of mill manager Don Blake and the mill's pollution committee with television personality Werner Troyer in charge of production and Jack Long of Vancouver as cameraman.

The film crew visited the new effluent plant at the mill and shot a typical meeting between management and members of the pollution committee exposing ecological problems and posing solutions.

Among those appearing in the film are Alberni and District Labor Council president Dan Connell, and Jim Spencer of the papermakers union, plus several mill employees.

Extra Check On Pollution

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. has announced completion and start-up of a $3.5 million water pollution control installation at its pulp and paper plant in Port Alberni.

A company spokesman estimated a total of $10 million has been spent on various anti-pollution systems at the mill since it was built in 1948. A $1 million electrostatic precipitator was recently completed there.

Bennett Sees Election If Unions 'Cause Chaos'

—Jim Ryan

Tear in Eye

While teamsters picket outside Legislature, Premier Bennett, with tear in his eye, listens to their own Centennial song sung by group of 60 students from Burnaby's Gilmore elementary school. Stage is main rotunda of building. Premier was on his way to House chamber.

House Backs Work Motion

By DON COLLINS and IAN STREET

The question of what happens next—a return to work in the trucking industry, a head-on collision between government and labor, or even a provincial election—hangs over B.C. in the wake of a historic 4½-hour debate in the Legislature Wednesday.

Premier Bennett has made it clear he is willing to stand or fall on the results government action might bring.

His pronouncement was made before the B.C. Legislature passed a resolution designed to end a strike-lockout that began only last Friday in the trucking and warehouse industry.

No Word on Order

The necessary back-to-work order would have to be drawn up by cabinet, but Bennett wasn't prepared to say outside the House when such a move would be made.

Just the same, one side in the dispute—the Automotive Transport Labor Relations Association—was ready to move immediately.

Said Carl Anshelm, ATLRA director: "We will comply with the wishes of the Legislature — I am now sending a telegram to the teamsters ending the lockout."

The union, however, wasn't ready to say what way it would move.

Senator Ed Lawson, Canadian director of the teamsters, said that no decision would be made by the union on whether or not to obey a government order until the union is served with such an order.

Even then, the union's West Coast officers would have to study the order closely.

SMALL SIGN-BEARER joined unidentified teamsters demonstrating outside Legislature Wednesday just before debate began on back-to-work resolution. Fraser Leversedge, 3, of 4035 Magdalen, Saanich, was passing by with his mother when teamster put sign in his hand.—(Ellis Shipman)

Year's Bus Loss Hits $775,000

B.C. Hydro buses in Greater Victoria operated at a loss of $775,000 in the fiscal year 1969-70, it was learned Wednesday in the Legislature.

In answers to written questions, Premier Bennett disclosed that total loss for the Hydro urban transit system that year was $4.7 million, of which Hydro paid $2.7 million, the other $2 million being paid by the provincial government.

The $775,000 represented 17 per cent of the total loss, with the other 83 per cent being incurred by the Greater Vancouver transit system.

But revenue covered a smaller portion of expenses in Victoria than in Vancouver. In Victoria, the revenue was 68 per cent of the expenses, while in Vancouver it covered 79 per cent of the costs.

Total operating expenses in Victoria for 1969-70 were $2.5 million while revenue was $1.7 million. Similar figures for Vancouver were: revenue, $13.5 million; expenses, $17.4 million.

Last week the provincial government made an offer to the Vancouver and Victoria regions to join in managing the transit system, provided

U.S. 'Will Give In' To N-Blackmail

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI) — Gen. Curtis Lemay predicted Tuesday that within 18 months the United States would be forced to give in to a Soviet ultimatum to "capitulate or else."

The retired air force chief of staff, who was George Wallace's vice-presidential running mate in 1968, said he anticipated that Russia would serve ultimatums, including "complete withdrawal of American forces in Vietnam," and that President Nixon would have no choice but to surrender or succumb to the demands.

Asked to define what he meant by "or else," he replied, "nuclear weapons." He said "Russia is spending money on what is today the finest strategic weapons system in the world."

Allowance May Hinge On Number of Children

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister John Munro said Wednesday he thinks his department's white paper proposal to change the family allowance system will have to be altered to take a family's number of children into account as well as its income.

But in general terms, he said, he still considers the cutoff point of $10,000 income, beyond which the social security white paper proposes that family allowances not be paid, is reasonable.

"We are trying to come up with some type of tapering formula that would eliminate the situation of a family with one child and $9,800 income receiving some benefits, and a family with 10 children and $10,100 income receiving none," he said in an interview.

"The only thing I can tell you is that we will have to bring in some formula, I think, that is based on the number of children."

He had noted in the House that a proposal on $10,000 as an income limit for family allowance recipients had been proposed in the white paper, but that it had only been a proposal, not a determined policy.

OTTAWA (UPI) — Members of a Commonwealth committee set up last month to look into British arms sales to South Africa will be canvassed to determine if a meeting of the committee is "still worthwhile," it was disclosed here Wednesday.

Commonwealth Secretary-General Arnold Smith and Canadian External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp agreed here Wednesday to go ahead with efforts to convene the meeting of the committee.

A Canadian spokesman said after the one-hour closed meeting that Smith would be getting in touch with the other members of the committee to see if they agreed with Canada that a meeting was "still worthwhile."

For Oceans

The eight-nation committee was established by the recent Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in Singapore to examine British claims that arms sales to South Africa were necessary for the security of the South Atlantic and Indian oceans.

However, the British government announced Monday it would sell Wasp military helicopters to the apartheid South African government without waiting for the committee's findings and without further Commonwealth consultations.

Little Boy Kidnapped By German Leftists

BONN (AP) — A band of leftist terrorists has kidnapped a seven-year-old boy and is holding him hostage for the release of leftist West German lawyer Horst Mahler, a Munich lawyer disclosed Wednesday.

The kidnapers are also demanding a ransom of 200,000 marks ($34,000) from the West German republic for the release of the boy, the lawyer said.

The boy, Michael Luhmer from the village of Niederbachem, near Bonn, has been missing since Monday.

Mahler is being held in West Berlin on suspicion of aiding the escape last May of Andreas Baader, 27, who had been serving a three-year term for arson at a Frankfurt department store.

The Munich lawyer, Rolf Bossi, said his office received a call Wednesday demanding the ransom money.

Bonds Just Too Good

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

In an immediate sequel to the Bank of Canada's cut-the-rate policy, the government of Canada announced closure on its current issue of Canada savings bonds as from March 5.

Normally the CSB issues run until late August or early September when they are withdrawn to make way for the following year's issue introduced in November.

They have not hitherto been withdrawn as early as this.

The reason for withdrawal is that, compared with other call money investments, they are paying far too high a rate of return to the holder.

Issued for a period of 11 years, the 1970-71 savings bonds have an average yield of 7½ per cent, and if they are held to maturity allowing the interest to accumulate each $100 invested will become $227.50 by 1981.

This year they pay 6½ per cent; for the next three years they pay 7½ per cent, and for the last seven years they pay 8 per cent.

Because the yield of 7½ per cent is at least one point

SOME ARCHITECTS suggest darkest areas on drawing of Saanich Peninsula and Victoria area might be high-population zones of future.

Pay as You Play

A Central Saanich farmer suggested Wednesday night that people who want to enjoy pastoral scenes will have to pay for them, possibly by contributing to a fund that would buy farms and lease them to operators.

William Taylor, who has a herd of 300 dairy cattle at 2973 MacIntyre, told a meeting organized by a group of architects: "There is no reason why I should turn my back on my life's investment. We farmers are not prepared to turn around and walk away. If you want farms, they will have to be preserved by some action of the government or the group that enjoys such scenery."

Taylor was in an audience of about 100 who attended a meeting organized by the Vancouver Island Chapter, Architectural Institute of B.C. The topic was Project Peninsula and it was chosen to stimulate discussion about where the Greater Victoria area would accommodate the one or two million persons who might live there within 50 years.

Perpetuity

Earlier in the day, Taylor explained, he was with a group from the B.C. Federation of Agriculture that presented a brief to the Legislature's standing committee on agriculture. The brief suggested farm land be dedicated as such for perpetuity.

However, he pointed out to the meeting in the Empress there were some contradictions.

The chairman of the BCFA committee that prepared the brief had his farm expropriated by the B.C. government for the Roberts Banks superport. He was paid $750,000 and now is leasing it from the government at $50 an acre annually. The man was not named.

Architect Ben Levinson said the problems went beyond transit service that operated in 10-minute frequencies with fares of 10 cents for standing room would be possible. It could have a fare schedule that would allow a passenger to be seated for 25 cents, use a compartment for 50 cents and a compartment with a telephone for 55 cents.

With Phone

"Why not a compartment with a phone and a drink for $1?"

Levinson also made reference to "farms, sitting there, unimproved, waiting to be subdivided."

"I beg your pardon," shouted Brian Hoole, a Saanich farmer who lives at 5675 Oldfield Road.

R. W. Smeeth, another architect, said living in the Greater Victoria area was gentle and "very rare for this hemisphere." However, the architects that were at the meeting were not proposing any simple methods of preserving the environment and "we're not here as planners or economists."

Smeeth said one answer to the problem of plugging street with cars and covering the countryside with subdivisions might be in developing independent communities of 100,000 population, many of whom would live in medium and high-density structures. "Rather than flocking to simply preserving the environment — they involved preserving a quality of life.

He wondered whether two-layered streets might ease the issue of finding room for cars. Already one-third of Victoria's physical area is roads.

Traffic travelling in two layers would make more green space available, allow for such things as bicycle paths and possibly even improvements in the transit service, Levinson said. He wondered whether a come ... and when they get here, they have to be able to enjoy the same thing as we do now."

Architect H. C. Charlesworth said that before a satisfactory solution might be arrived at, the right questions must be asked.

"We may even find that after asking the right questions, we may be able to improve the environment. We must progress but we must ask questions as to the direction of the progress, as to whether it will be desirable to the people living in the area."

Charlesworth explained that many of his acquaintances had chosen the Victoria area for their homes because of their infatuation with the environment.

Certain Way

"This part of the world gives us a certain way of life that is very satisfying. We must then ask what are the priorities, what are the values, and we look around and find many people have the same outlook," he added. "We are not here as statisticians, planners or economists — not even magicians. We are here as people to seek some approach to preserving this environment."

Architects, said Charlesworth, are basically trained in the sciences "with a liberal sprinkling of the confusion of technology."

One of the principles of science is the art of discovery and he said he hoped the community would join the architects in first making an analysis of problems and coming to solutions.

'No Simple Method Proposed'

Bay, bring a population of about 200 persons to each acre.

"One hundred persons on an acre is not an atrocious thing — they are not necessarily crammed together," he added.

He said the architects, when they discussed a topic for the meeting, felt Greater Victoria would attract many more persons with the same interests as those who now live in the area. "We have to allow them to

Phony Complaint Letters Arouse Business Wrath

The manager of the Victoria Better Business Bureau had harsh words Wednesday for the University of Victoria after a psychology professor had his class send phony letters of complaint to several local businesses.

"There were approximately 45 students and each sent out a number of letters so there were probably a minimum of 100 sent out," said Bill Tindall, of the Better Business Bureau. Tindall said the letters which were taken from form examples provided by psychology professor, Dr. Lorne Rosenbloom, included three types ranging from "nice" through "harsh" to those threatening to report the establishment of regulatory agencies.

Apologies Sent

Rosenbloom told the Colonist that letters of apology and explanation had already been sent out to all that had received complaints from his students. "It's just like to forget about it," Rosenbloom told the Colonist. "Perhaps we should not have used the most severe criticism."

Rosenbloom explained that the purpose of the assignment was to determine the best manner of obtaining favorable results when writing letters of complaint. The quick response that was received, he said, indicated the degree of concern the firms have for their products.

Cheques, Too

"A number requested we send the product back and others have sent cheques to replace them. The cheques have been returned to the companies," he said. Tindall said, "Here are the people in the business community supporting fund-raising drives for the university and then having the confidence of their customers undermined like this. "It is atrocious," Tindall said. "This is a terrible situation to foster among business people."

'Profiteers'

The letters of complaint contained phrases such as "profiteers like you"; "shoddy merchandise"; "garbage like this"; and "lying about it (quality) in your advertising," said Tindall.

"This was extremely short-sighted on the part of the instructor," Tindall said. "The university must have some sort of public relations man or liaison with the community to give them some sort of advice. "Our intention is to make a report and lodge a protest with the administration of the university."

Tindall said that although some of the letters referred to reporting an establishment to the Better Business Bureau, the agency was not even forewarned of the experiment.

He said the situation would have been quite different if the study had actually been directed at firms providing shoddy merchandise or service instead of indiscriminately as was done.

"That way it might have had some value," he said. "But this way, all they're doing is inviting a belligerent attitude from some business people."

Eric Lewis, owner of Big Louie's Drive-In, said he was one of those who received a letter telling him he should be ashamed of himself for selling junk and then lying about it in advertisements.

Hate Mail?

"I wonder how they can get away with this when there are laws on the books preventing sending hate literature," Lewis said.

Lewis said he thought incidents such as this would pull the "already pretty low" image of UVic "just a little bit lower."

Frank Whyte, of the Mello-Spot Drive-In, echoed Lewis' suggestion that the university would suffer from this sort of "not very well thought out" exercise.

"We probably won't be very liberal when someone comes around for a donation," Whyte said. "It's kind of an underhanded thing to do to someone who is in business."

Bill Webb, president of the Vancouver Island branch of the Canadian Restaurant Association, said the association's directors have been discussing the incident and will probably issue a statement Thursday.

Trunk Sewers Possible Without Voter Approval

The Capital Regional Board now has the power to build trunk sewers and disposal facilities in unorganized areas without asking for voter's approval.

The amended letters patent was presented to the board at a regular Wednesday meeting. The change had been requested by the board. Areas affected are View Royal, Langford, Colwood, Metchosin and Sooke.

Board chairman Hugh Curtis said the change will mean that provision for the outlying districts can be built into all new facilities, providing sufficient capacity, for future years. He pointed out voter's approval will still be needed before laterals are installed. Laterals are designed to provide for population growth up until the year 2015.

"To put major pipe in the ground without the capacity for areas not yet in the system would surely be foolish," he said. The change will not apply to the Gulf Islands, including Salt Spring Island, which are still excluded from the board's sewer program.

In other business the board: ● Agreed to take over responsibility for the Finnerty

Cove outfall from Saanich and undertook to start oceanographic studies as soon as possible.

● Appointed an ad hoc committee to study the regionalization of social services, with Ald. Edith Gunning as chairman.

● Set March 15 as the date for a public hearing into rezoning three properties as campground zones. The hearing will be held in Elizabeth Fisher junior high school.

● Authorized secretary-treasurer Dennis Young to apply for a $750,000 loan from the federal "make-work" program, for the Colwood-Landford ice arena and recreational centre.

Strike Vote Expected At Dockyard

Some 1,200 naval dockyard workers in Esquimalt will take a strike vote, probably next week, following rejection Wednesday of a federal treasury board wage offer.

Tom Graham, West Coast president of the federal government Dockyards Trades and Labor Council, said in an interview strike votes will be held both in Esquimalt and Halifax unless a "meaningful" wage offer is made.

The council is made up of some 11 individual trade unions with a combined membership of about 3,000 — 1,200 of them working in Esquimalt.

The council's contract expired Oct. 1, 1970, and talks have continued since that time.

Graham said the treasury board had offered West Coast workers a 42-cent increase, compared with 27 cents offered their counterparts on the east coast.

"At the moment they are 85 cents behind the West Coast workers — this offer was an absolute insult," said Graham.

He said the offer was rejected by workers on both coasts by a combined vote of 95 per cent.

Graham said the union and the treasury board had just completed a conciliation board sitting, which had recommended increases of 42 cents for the West Coast and 37 for the east.

A minority report had recommended 34 and 27-cent increases, noted Graham, and the treasury board had combined both recommendations in its offer.

He said the rejection vote in Esquimalt was an unselfish move in support of the eastern workers.

At the same time, he said, workers were aware of the need for unity between the eastern and western parts of the union.

"If we allow this union to be split asunder by these wage offers, then we'll be anybody's patsies," said Graham.

"This is really a fight for survival as one union on a national basis."

He said Halifax workers are already organizing their strike vote, and it is hoped the Esquimalt vote will coincide.

Also at issue in the dispute, said Graham, are the fringe benefits such as annual and statutory holidays, severance pay and overtime rates.
